House Boosts Liquor Tax to Take Place of Family Levy

Increased Tariffs Are Shouted Down

Beverage in District Now Will Be Assessed $3.25 All Told.

By Robert C. Albright.

The House yesterday voted to increase the Federal tax on hard liquor 25 cents a gallon, 6¼ cents a quart, 5 cents a fifth, 3⅛ cents a pint and a half-cent a jigger, depending on the strength of your highball.

The increase was written into the Administration's tax revision bill to retrieve a revenue loss claimed by Treasury officials when the House on a rampage Wednesday tossed out of the bill the Ways and Means Committee's "third basket" penalty tax on closely held corporations.

Despite warnings of revival of bootlegger traffic and wet and dry arguments reminiscent of the twilight of prohibition and the early days of repeal, members voted, 160 to 34, for the amendment independently sponsored by Representative A. Willis Robertson (Democrat), of Virginia.

Consumer Won't Pay Tax.

The present liquor tax is $2 a gallon, and the Robertson amendment would raise it to $2.25.

"It won't be passed on to consumers, and it won't increase the price of your drink," Robertson told reporters. "Besides, liquor is a luxury, anyway."

As for the District, there was the prospect of a $3.25 tax per gallon. A House sub-committee has written a 50-cent increase into the District revenue bill, which, with the Federal 25-cent increase, would add 75 cents to the present $2 Federal tax and the 50-cent District tax; total, $3.25.

Approval of the liquor tax raise and adoption of another amendment placing a new 6 cents a pound excise tax on imported pork and 3 cents a pound on imported pork products, brought the new tax revision measure to the point of passage.

But the hour was late (6:30 p. m.), so leaders adjourned until noon today when at least three roll call votes may be ordered on salient features of the bill.

Will Try to Send Bill Back.

In prospect today was a record vote on the punitive tax on family-type and closely held corporations, already overwhelmingly defeated on two preliminary counts.

Then House Republicans will move to send the bill back to committee, probably basing their motion on demand for repeal of the undivided profits tax on corporations, still retained in principle in the committee bill.

The final roll call will come on passage of the bill, which will go immediately to the Senate Finance Committee, where hearings will open Monday. Senate tax authorities yesterday were in conference with L. H. Parker, expert for the joint committee on internal rev-

House Ladies Explode Over Cosmetic Tax

'It's a Man's World,' They Sigh as Move to Drop Impost Fails.

"Vanity of vanities; all is vanity," said the House yesterday, as it voted to continue the present 10 per cent tax on cosmetics.

"It's a man's world, and the age of chivalry is dead," said the five lady members of the House, who battled for beauty—and lost.

REP. NORTON.

The "powder-puff bloc" lined up to a woman behind Representatives Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, in her fight for taxless loveliness.

"Why don't you be sporting?" pleaded Mrs. Norton.

"Give the women a chance," said Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers (Republican), of Massachusetts. "Give the working girl a chance."

Winter Stages Comeback With Two-Inch Snow

With spring only 10 days distant, winter made a stubborn stand in Washington yesterday, spreading 2.3 inches of snow, heaviest fall of the season, and causing nearly 30 auto accidents on slippery streets.

Starting with rain early yesterday and changing to sleet at 5:45 a. m., the snow started shortly before 7 a. m., and stopped at 1:55 p. m. Had the snow not been unusually moist, Weather Bureau officials said, the city would have been covered by more than 4 inches.

At Washington Airport, all morning and early afternoon trips were canceled and only one plane took off, late in the afternoon. A Washington passenger, E. F. Leggett, and nine others narrowly escaped death when an American Airlines plane was forced down near Richlands, N.

Mooney's Pardon 2 Votes Short of Majority Needed

Sacramento, Calif., March 10 (AP). The California Assembly, which is considering two proposals to pardon Tom Mooney, heard the white-haired convict's own story today, then voted 39 to 33 in favor of a resolution which would grant Mooney a legislative pardon, the legality of which is undetermined.

This was two short of the necessary majority and the assembly recessed while the sergeant-at-arms rounded up absent members to provide the necessary voting strength.

Last year the legislative pardon measure passed the House, but was killed in the Senate.

Ickes, Willkie Swap Insults In TVA Row

By Franklyn Waltman.

Controversies centering around the Tennessee Valley Authority continued unabated yesterday as President Roosevelt made ready to meet with that agency's three directors at 11 a. m. today to demand of them facts justifying the charges they have been hurling publicly at one another—charges of bad faith on the one hand and obstructive tactics on the other.

Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes set off another quarrel between the Roosevelt Administration and the private electrical utilities when he accused Wendell Willkie, president of the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, of asking "us to conspire with him and to refuse to carry out our obligations to the cities (to which PWA had promised loans and grants for municipal power plants), in order that he may negotiate with TVA."

Willkie Strikes Back.

Willkie immediately struck back, asserting the Ickes statement was "an illustration of an unfortunate Government tendency to threaten with the left hand while making an offer with the right." He added that "this attitude on the part of Government officials, more than any other factor, has caused the present uncertainty and lack of confidence in this country, resulting in the serious decline in business and employment."

This exchange, resulting from the offer of TVA to purchase the private utilities in its region, and Willkie's expressed willingness to enter such negotiations, provided PWA holds its municipal power-ownership program in abeyance, apparently will have no effect on commencement of the negotiations toward this end.

Correspondence Revealed.

TVA last night announced that in order to suit the convenience of Willkie, Lilienthal had proposed that the first meeting for negotiations take place here next Wednesday, instead of at Chattanooga on Tuesday, as originally suggested. Willkie on Wednesday indicated he would meet with Lilienthal wherever and whenever the latter desired.

The exchange of correspondence between Willkie and Lilienthal was made public last night by TVA. In part this related to the deferment of PWA advances for municipal power plants. Lilienthal said TVA had no jurisdiction over this phase of the matter, but suggested that if headway in the negotiations were made

Democratic Party Is Out of the Red; Diners Still Paying

By the Associated Press.

James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman, announced yesterday that "for the first time in a generation, and perhaps since the origin of American parties, the Democratic organization is out of the red the year following a national campaign."

"The total proceeds of the Jackson dinners amounted to approximately $427,000," he said. "Under the pledge system, which permitted such guests as so desired to make their payments in small installments, the amount of cash received is, of course, much less than the total. However, there was enough to clear the national committee's accounts."

"It is an achievement that I believe is unparalleled in the history of American politics," he added.

Condors Patch Up Marital Tiff; Egg Hopefully Watched at Zoo

With a domestic triangle straightened out and an egg laid, Zoo officials yesterday started an anxious month's wait to see if the world's only pair of California condors in captivity would produce young for the first time.

William H. Blackburn, veteran head keeper, said he was more hopeful that the pair of the world's largest flying birds would actually hatch the egg than he has been since 1919. The female has laid an egg practically every year since then, but they have been broken or infertile.

The reason for the feeling of optimism is this: In the 35 years which the birds have been in the Zoo, two males have been in the cage. Their jealousy broke out into fights when eggs were laid, and so upset the routine that the eggs never had a chance to hatch, Blackburn stated.

But two months ago the male who did not mate with the female picked a fight with the prospective father. He was beaten so badly that Blackburn had to transfer him to another cage, where he now is kept. He almost died.

While the female sat on her grayish green egg, about four times the size of a hen's egg, yesterday in a wooden box, her mate sat solemnly in the snow on a pole high in their outdoor cage. All was quiet.

Whitney Is Indicted On Larceny Charge

Richard Whitney, former president of the New York Stock Exchange whose brokerage firm has failed, was indicted for misappropriating between $105,000 and $110,000 from a trust account left to his wife, shown here, and her sister. The indictment was obtained by District Attorney Thomas Dewey, New York's "racket buster."

Former President of New York Stock Exchange Accused of Misappropriating Trust Fund to Save Bankrupt Firm.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 10.—Richard Whitney, five times president of the New York Stock Exchange and during Wall Street's most critical years one of its leaders and spokesmen, late today was indicted for grand larceny in the first degree.

The indictment was obtained by District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, rackets prosecutor, less than four hours after State Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., had given Dewey the necessary approval.

Whitney, tall and stern, with a Harvard and Groton accent, a yachtsman and member of the city's most exclusive clubs, went with his attorney, Charles H. Tuttle, Republican leader, to Dewey's office to surrender.

$105,000 Theft Charged.

The specific charge against him is that he misappropriated between $105,000 and $110,000 from a trust account left to his wife, sister-in-law, Harvard University, and St. Paul's School of Concord, N. H.

The complaining witness against the former financial leader was his sister-in-law, Mrs. Mary Sheldon Murphy.

Trying to save his brokerage firm from the bankruptcy it petitioned for Tuesday, Whitney, the indictment charges, used funds left in an estate of which he was a co-trustee, leaving only one share of stock of Bethlehem Steel Co. in the trust.

About 4 o'clock this afternoon, Dewey, Tuttle, Whitney and the foreman of the grand jury, went before General Sessions Judge William Allen, who paroled Whitney overnight in the custody of his attorney.

Asks for High Bail.

Dewey asked for high bail. Bail was set at $10,000. From the court Whitney went to police headquarters to be booked and fingerprinted.

Tuttle, pointing out that Whitney in a public confession of wrongdoing yesterday, had said he did not wish to evade his personal responsibility, asked that pleading on the arraignment be held in abeyance until morning, and Dewey did not oppose the request.

The indictment came so suddenly

Rebels Take Belchite and Madrid Pass

War's Biggest Offensive Smashes Toward East Coast.

Surprise Attackers on Central Front Near Old Capital.

By the Associated Press.

Belchite, Spain, March 10.—Insurgent infantry occupied this eastern front city late today after day-long shelling forced government troops to retreat to the east.

Americans Captured.

At noon the white-haired, ruddy-cheeked commander declared calmly, "We will take Belchite today." At 5 p. m. the city was captured.

Spanish (insurgent press service) dispatches to London tonight said a number of Americans were among the prisoners taken when insurgents captured Belchite. The dispatch said foreign volunteers had been rushed into Belchite in an attempt to stem the insurgent advance.

Insurgent drives on two fronts smashed through government defenses guarding the northern mountain barrier to Madrid and pressed an eastward drive toward the Mediterranean coast.

The eastern push, on a 70-mile front in Aragon Province below Zaragoza, was the greatest offensive of the civil war. It was aimed at what insurgents hoped would be the decisive blow, separation of Valencia and Barcelona, the government's main coastal strongholds.

(Reports from Zaragoza said the insurgents had massed the most formidable infantry, cavalry and aviation strength of the war for the drive.)

Loyalists Admit Losses.

On the central front, victorious Franco forces marched into abandoned government positions on the southern slopes of the Guadarrama Mountains for the first time since the insurgent siege ring closed around Madrid early in the war.

Madrid dispatches acknowledged that the insurgents, striking swiftly at night through the snow-blanketed mountains, forced government troops from their positions near the Reventon Pass, about 30 miles north of Madrid.

Insurgents now are midway between the Madrid-Burgos and the Madrid-Segovia highways, both of which had been blocked by strong government forces since May, 1937.

Insurgents said their vanguard crept through the passes and down the southern slopes before government outposts could sound the alarm.

Government troops executed a quick counterattack to recapture two mountain passes, according to reports from the front.

Insurgent reports from the eastern front said Franco's troops had captured 18 villages in the northern Aragon sector. They said the government lost more than 1,000 men killed and hundreds captured.

Fuehrer Says Plebiscite Call by Schuschnigg Breaks Agreement.

The European Situation.

Talk of "civil war" was heard in Austria as 40 were injured in clashes precipitated by Chancellor Schuschnigg's sudden call for a plebiscite on Austrian independence.

Nazis Await Orders.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, March 10.—Disorders in Graz and Vienna and a threat of possible Nazi sabotage and terrorism today were precipitated by the sudden call for a plebiscite Sunday on the issue of Austrian independence.

More than 40 persons were injured in clashes and the words "civil war" were heard in Graz, Nazi stronghold, as the pre-plebiscite campaign opened with intensive propaganda, parades and exhortations.

Nazis were in a sullen, angry mood as they waited for word from Berlin before determining the attitude they would adopt for Sunday.

Urged to Boycott Polls.

Dr. Hugo Jury, Nazi leader, advised Nazis to stay away from the polls, contending the plebiscite was "unconstitutional and an insult to loyal Austrians."

The Munich, Germany radio station, which is heard throughout Austria, broadcast an announcement that boycotting the plebiscite would be the Nazi answer.

Shouting, marching groups of Nazis demonstrated in Vienna and larger provincial cities throughout the night, occasionally clashing with Fatherland Front bands. At times Vienna police used batons and the flat sides of sabers to crowd paraders off the main streets.

Soldiers Sent to Provinces.

Demonstrations in Vienna were more or less good-natured, but authorities were on the alert. The feeling in Graz was more intense. Motorized army detachments were seen leaving Vienna during the night, presumably to strengthen garrisons at Graz and other Nazi strongholds.

In Vienna, Nazis charged that Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, by Ancient Quarries Used by Cheops Found in Egypt

Cairo, Egypt, March 10 (AP).—Buried under the sand since 1700 B. C., diorite quarries worked when the tyrant Pharaoh Cheops made Egyptian multitudes build the great pyramid between 5,000 and 6,000 years ago, have been found in the desert near the Sudan frontier by two Britons, G. W. Murray and R. Englebach.

A black granite "stela," or stone slab, was found at the scene with a cartouche of Cheops—a figure bearing his name—and the name of the locality, "hunting ground of Cheops." A heavy copper chisel and the remains of many workmen's huts also were discovered.

An ancient 60-mile long road, marked by large cairns and hundreds of centuries-old hoofmarks, led to the Nile.

Cheops, the pyramid builder, made all the Egyptians labor for his monument, working in relays of 100,000 men every three months. He sacrificed the honor of his daughter to obtain the money to complete his pyramid, and the princess built herself a small pyramid of the stones given to her by her lovers.

Thomas Mann Says Pacifism Toward Fascists Tempts War

If democracy is to stand up against Fascism, it must rediscover its virility and come to realize that with a "pacifism which will not have war at any price, it is provoking, not banishing war," Dr. Thomas Mann, Nobel prize winner who is a voluntary exile from Germany, declared last night at the Washington Forum.

Freedom today needs no "humanity of weakness and self-doubting tolerance," but "a humanity strong in will and the soldierly determination to preserve itself," he asserted.

It is a "humane illusion" to think fascism can be dealt with and won over to the idea of peace and collective reconstruction by "understanding and loyal concessions," according to Dr. Mann, who declared that democracy and fascism inhabit different planets and live at different epochs.

In the "hybrid condition between war and peace" which exists today and "is its own invention," Fascism enjoys a great advantage and can continue to bluff its own and other peoples and "carry on its blackmail of democratic love of peace and perhaps achieve its own political ends without war," Dr. Mann said.

Getting down to specific cases, he declared that it is "either too soon

Mayor Helped Break Strike, Ex-Sheriff Says

Johnstown Executive 'Used' Citizens Committee, Senate Is Told.

By the Associated Press.

Michael, J. Boyle, former sheriff of Cambria County, Pa., told the Senate Civil Liberties Committee yesterday he believed Mayor Daniel J. Shields of Johnstown "used" the Johnstown citizens committee to "break" the strike of Bethlehem Steel Corporation employes last June.

Earlier, Mayor Shields told the committee he had destroyed the records of the special police he enrolled last June during the Bethlehem Steel strike.

Boyle said that on June 2, two days after the Pennsylvania National Guard had declared martial law in Johnstown, he attended a meeting at the offices of the Johnstown Chamber of Commerce.

Sheriff Assails Mayor.

"The citizens committee took the position that the plant was closed as the result of the telegram I sent," Boyle testified.

"I told them that the attitude of the mayor from the beginning indicated to me that the mayor had enlisted their services to break the strike," the stocky former sheriff declared bluntly.

"I said that knowingly or unknowingly the citizens committee had been used throughout the strike to gain the objective of the mayor."

Boyle said his telegram to the governor was "not intended" to bring about martial law.

Records Destroyed.

As chairman La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, read off each demand in his long subpena, Shields answered as much as he said he could "from memory." He promised to look for such records as the city government might have. The records of the oaths taken by special police and of special police pay rolls were among those he said had been destroyed when the strike became 'finished business."

Shields pointed out that, as mayor, he had no authority to appoint deputy sheriffs, but that he had recruited 500 volunteer police after the C. I. O. strike started against the steel mills. They served, he said, from June 14 to June 25.

He testified they were given helmets and night sticks, but were not permitted to carry arms. He personally paid for some of the helmets while the city furnished the rest, he said. The city, he added, furnished all the nightsticks from a supply on hand.

When Shields said he had no record of any money received during the strike, La Follette dismissed him from the witness stand.

Piney Branch Citizens Oppose Hospital on Upshur Street Site

CAPT. G. L. SHOREY.

Group Would Favor Location for Wilson Normal School, Says Capt. G. L. Shorey, President; Liquor Stores Are Unwanted.

By Christine Sadler.

Any poll of public opinion among members of the Piney Branch Citizens Association at this time would say that their first and foremost feeling is opposition to use of the former Tuberculosis Hospital site on Upshur street for anything except educational or recreational purposes.

"Our records show we have been against a hospital on that site for 25 years. We opposed a move to put Gallinger Hospital there in the first place, and we still are opposed to putting any part of it there," Capt. G. L. Shorey, president of the association, said yesterday.

"If the Wilson Normal School should be put there, however, we would like it very much," he continued.

Formed 26 Years Ago.

The association takes its name from old Piney Branch, which at one time ran down what is now Arkansas avenue. Its territory includes a combination of what was once known as Saul's Addition and the Piney Branch Park Section. It was organized 26 years ago and has approximately 200 members, "who can be very active when any local problem comes up."

Capt. Shorey, whose title is a "peacetime" one, joined the group 20 years ago soon after he moved to the then sparsely-settled neighborhood. He became chairman of the membership committee in 1918, when the late Edgar B. Henderson was elevated from this job to the presidency, and then followed Henderson to the chief executive position seven years ago.

Fight on Liquor Stores.

Next to the anti-hospital fight, his association is most interested in keeping down the number of liquor stores in the area.

No action has been taken in regard to local suffrage or national representation for the District, but Capt. Shorey believes the members would be opposed to the former but would "very much favor some form of the latter."

The captain is a native of Baltimore and a veteran of the Spanish War. His title was bestowed after he helped organize the John Jacob Astor Camp of Spanish War Veterans and became its second captain.

He came to Washington in 1901 and entered Government service in 1907. Last year he completed 30 years in the office of the chief clerk of the Department of Commerce.

"I came to Washington to get some pension matters straightened out, and just never got away. I always have felt something of a native, anyway, since my mother's family lived here many years ago," he said.

Makes Peanut Brittle.

Within recent years Capt. Shorey has limited his extra-curricular activities to being president of the citizens' association and attending all programs of the National Geographic Society.

And to making peanut brittle! He doubts—as do also those who have eaten his productions—that any one else can match his brittle-making talent. He uses an old Baltimore formula, which he worked out after wasting 50 or 60 pounds of sugar.

"I grew tired of wishing for peanut brittle just like George Kostka made and set myself to the task of learning how he did it. Now I make it for all my friends," he said.

Capt. Shorey lives at 4809 Iowa avenue, northwest, has a wife, two daughters, and two grandchildren.

On Monday—Charles A. Langley, president of Chillum Heights Citizens for more than a quarter century, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Rumanian Envoy Accepted by U. S.

By the Associated Press.

The United States has accepted the appointment of the new Rumanian Minister, Maj. Radu Irimescu, despite protests from the American Jewish Congress that Irimescu was connected with the recent anti-Jewish Goga government.

Secretary of State Hull conveyed this information yesterday in a letter to Senator Lonergan (Democrat), who had asked for information concerning Irimescu.

"It is understood that Maj. Irimescu is not a member of any political party in Rumania," Hull said.

President Will Not Demand Anti-Monopoly Law This Session.

By the United Press.

Prospects for early sine die adjournment of Congress, probably by June 1, were strengthened yesterday when House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn said after a White House conference that Mr. Roosevelt will not defend anti-monopoly legislation until next session.

The Chief Executive had indicated previously that he was against increasing the congressional burden and Rayburn's statement elated the membership who are anxious to complete pending business and hasten home for pre-election campaigns.

One-third of the Senate and the entire House of 435 is up for re-election.

Rayburn said that with anti-trust legislation on the shelf the House can wind up its business by April 15. This includes passage of the remaining appropriation bills, the naval expansion program, the revised tax bill, a wages-hours measure, and government reorganization, probably in modified form.

The Senate faces a sterner task but leaders believe it can quit by June 1, or June 15 at the latest. Chief obstacles are the tax bill, wages-hours and government reorgainzation. Powerful blocs already have formed against the measures and the President's navy bill also faces a rough trip.

Rayburn indicated that if Mr. Roosevelt decides to send Congress a message on monopolies, it will merely propose study of the problem the results of which would be used as the basis for passage of corrective measures next year.

U. S. Asks Ruling On Crop Control

By the United Press.

The Federal Government sought a new ruling from the Supreme Court yesterday on how far it may legally go in imposing crop control, but Solicitor General Robert J. Jackson said no new plan is being considered by the Administration.

Jackson asked the court to pass on constitutionality of the Bankhead cotton act, which was repealed in 1936 after the Agricultural adjustment act was voided.

U. S. Exports Increase Over January of 1937

By the Associated Press.

The United States sold more goods to and brought less goods from every part of the world in January than in the same month last year.

The Commerce Department said yesterday January exports totaled $289,437,000 compared with $222,665,000 in January, 1937. Imports dropped from $240,252,000 to $170,763,000.

The Gallup Poll

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP.
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, March 10.—As Lord Perth, the British ambassador in Rome, opens discussions with the Italian government this week on the proposed Italo-British pact, public opinion in England is still predominantly hostile to Prime Minister Chamberlain's policy of making a deal with the Fascist powers.

George Gallup

The latest results of a poll conducted throughout England by the British Institute of Public Opinion, affiliate of the American Institute, show 56 per cent of British voters opposed to Chamberlain's foreign policy, as compared to 58 per cent opposed in preliminary returns made public a week ago.

The poll, which was begun three days after Anthony Eden resigned in protest against the Chamberlain policies, covered a scientifically selected cross-section of British voters. Following is the main question used in the survey and the results to date:

"Do you favor Mr. Chamberlain's proposed foreign policy?"

	Preliminary Results	Latest Results
Favor	26%	24%
Oppose	58	56
Undecided	16	20

Even rank and file voters of Mr. Chamberlain's own party are not enthusiastic about his foreign policy, the survey finds. Among those who have an opinion, as many oppose his policy as favor it. The actual sentiment of Conservative Party voters is: Favor Chamberlain's foreign policy, 38 per cent; against 38 per cent; undecided 24 per cent. Among rank and file voters of the opposition parties sentiment is more crystallized; 4 per cent favor the Chamberlain policy, 81 per cent oppose it, while 15 per cent are undecided.

Some observers who noted the preliminary results of the British Institute poll have declared that public opposition to Chamberlain's policy may actually strengthen his hand in dealing with Mussolini. They argue that so long as the British cabinet's hold over public support for this policy is precarious, Mussolini and Hitler will have to give Chamberlain "some very tangible assurances" if they expect him to swing British sentiment around to his policy.

Women Less Opposed.

The survey finds that Chamberlain's best friends, so far as his foreign policy is concerned, are the women of England. They are less against his proposed rapprochement with Italy than are the men voters. Their attitude appears to be that Chamberlain's policy will in the long run promote peace. The vote by sexes is as follows:

	Men	Women
Favor Chamberlain's Policy	21%	27%
Opposed	60	51
Undecided	19	22

Eden Sentiment Noted.

In addition to the question of Chamberlain's foreign policy, the survey tested sentiment regarding Anthony Eden's resignation. Latest results show that a large majority of voters think he was right to resign, and agree with his reasons for leaving office.

"Do you believe Mr. Eden was right in resigning?"

	Preliminary Results	Latest Results
Yes	71%	73%
No	19	13
Undecided	10	14

"Do you agree with Mr. Eden's reasons for resigning?"

	Preliminary Results	Latest Results
Yes	69%	62%
No	19	17
Undecided	12	21

Blum Hurries Effort to Form French Cabinet

United Nation Needed for War Loan, Austria Vote as Chautemps Quits.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 10.—Leon Blum, France's first Socialist premier, tonight tried to form a new cabinet to succeed the resigned government of Radical-Socialist Camille Chautemps.

The lanky, soft-spoken deputy promised to work speedily in face of the increasingly difficult domestic and foreign situation.

Chautemps resigned today because the Chamber of Deputies refused to vote him full financial and economic decree powers.

The 65-year-old Blum, who headed the first People's Front government from June 4, 1936, to June 21, 1937, accepted the task of forming a new cabinet as the leader of the largest party in the chamber.

Communists to Help.

It became known tonight that the Communists, who, with the Socialists and Radical-Socialists, make up the People's Front, had agreed for the first time to enter the cabinet since the coalition was constituted.

Blum obtained a promise from the Radical-Socialists through their leader, Edouard Daladier, to "consider" membership in a ministry where extremists were represented.

He was forced to mark time overnight, however, when they decided to meet again tomorrow before giving him a definite answer.

Political leaders urged speedy constitution of a new government particularly because of two factors:

1. The floating of the 10,000,000,000 franc (approximately $316,000,000) national defense loan scheduled for Monday necessitated domestic calm.

2. Austria's plebiscite set for Sunday demanded a united French nation in the international field.

French diplomacy also was seen as needing the calm provided by a strong government now that Anglo-Italian talks under Premier Chamberlain's "realistic" foreign policy were in progress.

Chautemps Denies Crisis.

Chautemps, who left the premiership after 51 days as the head of his second People's Front Cabinet, said the crisis which brought his call was "essentially political, rather than financial."

He said the Treasury was in a safe position although there was a prospective budget deficit of about $400,000,000 due to armament expenditures.

He described as "only transitory" the weakness of the franc which hovered between 31.70 and 31.80 francs to the dollar in late trading.

Death of 4 Ended Anti-Batista Plot, Cuban Army Says

Havana, March 10 (AP).—The army intelligence service today published a report on what it termed an anti-government plot uprooted last Monday night when four men were killed in a meeting at nearby Cojimar by a raiding army detachment.

The report indicated the conspirators were working to overthrow Col. Fulgencio Batista, chief of Cuba's armed forces.

Among those named as leaders of the plot were Cosme de la Torriente, former secretary of state; Dr. Joaquin Martinez Saenz, former secretary of the treasury and chief of the ABC political party, now in Miami, Fla., in exile, and two former mayors of Havana, Dr. Alejandro Vergara and Dr. William Belt.

It was known many arrests had been made, but the names of those held were not announced.

Reported claims of the conspirators that the plot had the support of the United States Government were branded as "grotesquely false" by American Ambassador J. Butler Wright.

British Plan to Make Army Life Attractive

London, March 10 (AP).—The campaign to make army life more attractive to the British Tommy is to be intensified.

Leslie Hore-Belisha, secretary for war, announced in the House of Commons today 1,608,000 pounds ($8,040,000) would be spent during the next fiscal year to improve conditions, including pay.

The Tommy is to get better food and quarters. "Superfluous" drill postures and superfluous equipment for him to polish will be eliminated, the war secretary said.

Londoners Heckle Ribbentrop As Parley With Halifax Fails

Reich Foreign Minister Refuses Assurance Hitler Will Let Austrian Voters Alone; Pair Deadlocked Over Colonial Issue.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 10.—Crowds heckled Joachim von Ribbentrop, Germany's new foreign minister, today as he sought with Britain to form a peaceful partnership in the face of increasing European unrest.

Von Ribbentrop and Viscount Halifax, British foreign secretary, conferred at the foreign office for more than two hours, while demonstrators outside increased from 30 to 500.

Both before and after the meeting, Von Ribbentrop had to brave the unfriendly crowd which surged against reinforced police lines, shouting "get out, Ribbentrop!" Some greeted him with the Communist clenched fist salute.

Discussion Secret.

What the former wine salesman and the British peer, both new as their governments' foreign ministers, discussed was concealed.

Reliable sources, however, said the conference was inconclusive and that gaunt Lord Halifax was disappointed with his first big effort.

He was understood to be especially disillusioned about Austria. Moved by the boldness of Austria's Chancellor Schuschnigg in resisting German encroachment, Lord Halifax was said to have expressed hope there would be no outside interference in Austria's plebiscite Sunday.

Von Ribbentrop, these sources said, flatly refused to commit himself.

Deadlock on Colonies.

The British, at whose request Von Ribbentrop was said to have conferred at this time, apparently were convinced that the moment was not ripe for the ministers' negotiations.

Although informed persons emphasized that the foreign ministers' talk was "exploratory," they said an apparent deadlock on the colonial question made an early agreement improbable.

Germany demands return of her former empire with no promises in exchange. Britain and France, which hold League of Nations mandates over most of them, insist the colonial question be coupled with a general European appeasement.

Muzzle on Press Asked.

Germany also demands better treatment at the hands of the British press. Von Ribbentrop was reported to have stressed the German view that Hitler, as head of state, should be spared newspaper attacks.

Lord Fairfax, however, was said to hold that press criticism of Der Fuehrer was justified since he also was in the position of a premier at the head of a government.

The British government, moreover, has only the power of suggestion with which to influence the press.

With these main hurdles to overcome, Britain apparently put more immediate stress on quick friendship with Italy. An accord with Rome would fortify Britain's hand in dealing with Germany—particularly with regard to central Europe, where Germany demands full freedom.

Rome Talks Encouraging.

First reports in diplomatic circles of the Rome talks between the Earl of Perth, British Ambassador to Italy, and Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister, were described as "fairly encouraging."

Count Ciano, diplomatic sources said, was understood to be willing to reduce Italian forces in Libya.

He was described as "vague," however, on the Spanish issue and as "unsympathetic" to the British plan to announce recognition of Italy's Ethiopian empire through the League of Nations. Withdrawal of foreign fighters from Spain's civil war is a British prerequisite for the friendship talks.

'Exotic' Film Find Wife of American, Court Plea Shows

Hollywood, March 10 (U.P.).—Sigrid Gurie, billed to American film audiences as Norway's answer to Sweden's Garbo, was identified in a prosaic divorce action tonight as Mrs. Thomas W. Stuart, the estranged wife of a young American businessman.

Stuart, in a cross-complaint for divorce, revealed that Sigrid had married him in California on October 4, 1935.

Stuart's attorney, while conceding that Sigrid came from Oslo, said that was at least four years ago, and not, as was popularly supposed, at a comparatively recent date.

Sigrid "arrived" in her first picture, "The Adventures of Marco Polo."

Raid Precautions Rise.

London, March 10 (AP).—Estimates of air raid precautions expenses during the fiscal year beginning April 1 were set today at £8,493,400 ($42,467,000). This was an increase of £3,315,600 ($16,578,000) over last year.

Frederick, Md., March 10.—Charles Ambush, 23, colored, whom officers traced to his home by a trail of blood after an attack upon a 79-year-old white woman January 16, was convicted of assault and battery today by judges of the Frederick County circuit court. Sentence was deferred.

The courtroom was jammed as Miss Fannie Beck, her face still bruised, told Judges Arthur D. Willard and Charles W. Woodward of the attack. She said a man wearing a muslin mask beat her in her Adamstown home on January 16.

A 30-year-old colored man, identified as Howard Harvey, wanted for the knife murder of three colored persons in Fairfax County early last year, was arrested yesterday in Roanoke, Va., the Associated Press reported.

The victims were Brent Thomas, 26; his wife, Grace, 24, and Wesley Lewis, 60, slain in the farm house of Thomas near Merrifield, Va. The woman, her throat cut, lived to tell the police that Harvey attacked them with a knife after an altercation over money.

Reich to Outlaw Vote in Austria If Unfavorable

Hitler Confers; May Protest Plebiscite as Breach of Pact.

By the United Press.

Berlin, March 10.—Reichsfuehrer Hitler, angered by the calling of a plebiscite Sunday to determine the future of Naziism in Austria, consulted with his advisers tonight on possible direct action.

Officials of the Third Reich asserted flatly that Germany will refuse to recognize any vote against "Auschluss." (Austro-German union) because the plebiscite is an outright anti-Nazi maneuver on the part of Chancellor Schuschnigg.

The Essen National Zeitung, organ of Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, asked tonight who Schuschnigg's "advisers" were in his decision to hold the plebiscite.

Failed to Inform Reich.

"None is able to say what men behind the scenes induced Schuschnigg to take this step . . . It is all the more surprising that Schuschnigg, notwithstanding the Berchtesgaden agreement, failed to inform the Reich government of his plans," the newspaper said.

Observers found deep significance in the national Zeitung's comment because of reports from Rome that Premier Mussolini knew in advance of Schuschnigg's plan and consented to it.

Many observers believed that Hitler, during the next 24 hours, might direct a message to Vienna protesting against the plebiscite.

Such a decision on Der Fuehrer's part undoubtedly would stir thousands of Austrian Nazis to even greater disorders than those reported from Vienna and other Austrian communities tonight.

Hitler May Cancel Pact.

It was conceivable, these observers said, that Schuschnigg's defiance of a German demarche might ultimately lead Hitler to renounce his February 12 "peace of Berchtesgaden" with Schuschnigg and throw down the gantlet for what might easily become a state of revolution in Austria.

A renunciation of the Berchtesgaden agreement would amount to a virtual withdrawal of Germany's pledge to uphold Austria's territorial integrity.

Fascist Council Adjourns.

Rome (Friday), March 11 (U.P.).—Premier Mussolini's Fascist grand council adjourned early today after discussion of Italy's future international course while rumors spread that the Rome-Berlin axis was weakening under the strain of Austrian developments.

Every phase of the European situation was believed to have been investigated in the report of Foreign Minister Count Ciano to the council.

U. S. Trails Powers In Farm Electricity

The United States trails many of the major countries, including Italy, France, England and Japan, in providing electricity to rural areas, C. C. Falkenwald, assistant director of the Rural Electrification Division, said yesterday.

Falkenwald, in a talk before the Cosmopolitan Club at the Carlton Hotel, explained that while Japan could boast electric service for 90 per cent of its rural area, only 700,000 out of $6,800,000 farm homes in the United States have electricity.

He said the Government rural electrification program would not duplicate existing power lines, adding that the REA functioned as a local organization, not in competition with private industry.

Court Will Act On Dissolution Of Loan Firm

Pending Request of Montgomery Building Association Is Studied.

Justice Jennings Bailey in District Court yesterday referred to the auditor of the court for study and a report, the pending request of the directors of the Montgomery Building and Loan Association that the institution be dissolved.

The assets of the association, which was declared to be solvent, are to be sold to the Perpetual Building Association if the dissolution plan is effected. The reference to the auditor, it was explained, was to provide a factual basis upon which the merits of the dissolution can be determined formally.

Meantime, holders of foundation suruplus certificates, of which there is an outstanding total of $320,500 have filed an intervening petition asking they be declared entitled to repayment of their investment in full. They fear, Attorney Lawrence Koenigsberger stated, that under the plan of dissoultion as presented by the directors, they will be left out. They ask that they be paid in full even before the stockholders are paid.

The petition listed assets of $567,355 and liabilities of $563,063, with the claims of stockholders of classes A, B, and C, almost making up that amount. By sending the proposal to the auditor for examination Justice Bailey tacitly admitted the court had jurisdiction to pass on the case. The auditor is expected to require at least a month to complete his study, after which the court again will go into the merits of the proposed dissolution.

A Watch IS MORE THAN A TIMEPIECE!

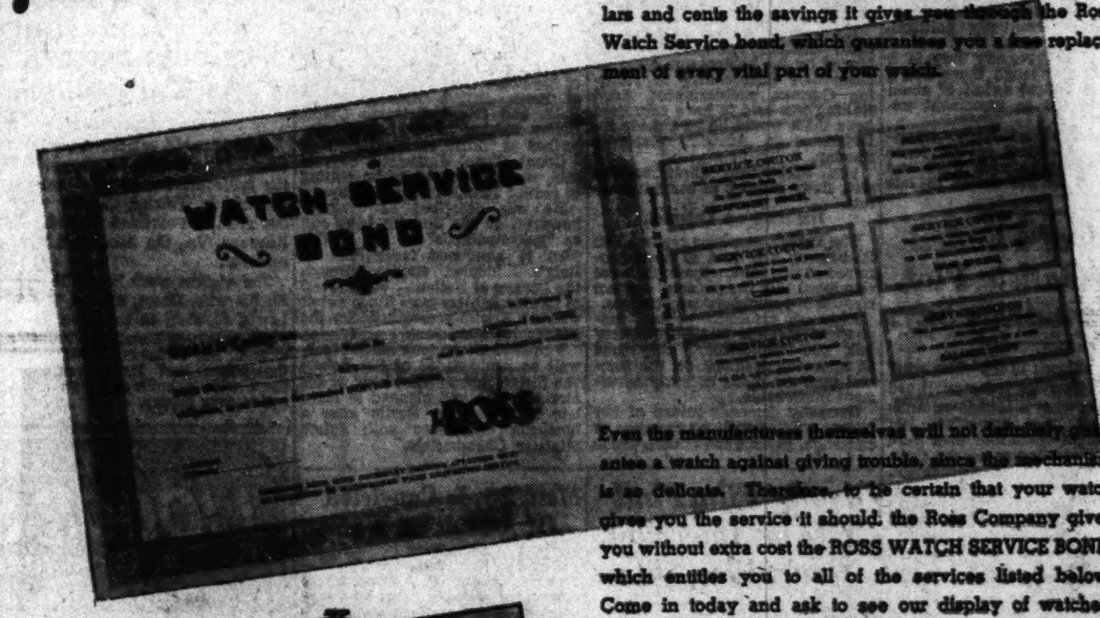
A WATCH from Ross is more than simply a means of knowing the correct time. It is a symbol of service—the same service that has been a definite factor in the growth of the Ross Company to a point where one out of every ten Washington residents is a customer of the Ross Store. Nor is this service merely theoretical. You can count in dollars and cents the savings it gives you through the Ross Watch Service bond, which guarantees you a free replacement of every vital part of your watch.



Even the manufacturers themselves will not definitely guarantee a watch against giving trouble, since the mechanism is so delicate. Therefore, to be certain that your watch gives you the service it should, the Ross Company gives you without extra cost the ROSS WATCH SERVICE BOND, which entitles you to all of the services listed below. Come in today and ask to see our display of watches, featuring only those which have gained national recognition. (Note: The Ross Watch Service Bond is exclusive with the Ross Company in Washington.)

Strayer Class Told Oldsters 'Made a Mess'

Richmond Editor Warns of Mortgaged Future for 1938 Graduates.

The elder generation has mortgaged the future of this year's college graduates, gambled with their business opportunities and will "kiss a $37,000,000,000 national debt goodby," Dr. Douglass Southall Freeman, biographer of Lee and editor of the Richmond News Leader, told graduates of Strayer College at graduation exercises last night in Memorial Continental Hall.

Declaring their elders have "made a mess of this topsy-turvy world," Dr. Freeman asserted that any change the next generation might bring about would be for the better. He added:

"Your task is ahead and there can be no compromise—either you are to go ahead or fall backward. I believe you will go ahead and be one of the greatest generations in the history of our country."

Addressing an attentive audience of more than 2,000, Dr. Freeman said, "Even with the problems before you, I believe you are better off than the boys and girls ten years your senior.

"The saddest fate of a girl back in 1920 was to come into womanhood. The flapper age was a blot in our history, but there is nothing flappant about you. They have even changed the name of jazz music out of respect of you—they couldn't make the music any worse so they changed the name."

The Richmond editor and winner of the Pulitzer Prize in 1934, concluded his address by advising graduates to do the small things well and avoid the slave of routine. "Initiative may die," he said, "if we continue to think there are no big opportunities ahead and continue to pass up the small opportunieies."

The speaker was introduced by Dr. Edmond S. Donoho, president of the school, while Elgie G. Purvis, dean of the school presided. Others who spoke briefly were Francis O. Voit, president of the accounting class and Mary Jane Kelly, president of the secretarial class.

The graduates were:

American Who Fought in Spain Says U. S. Has Best War Fliers and Planes.

Albert J. Baumler, 23, who says he served eight months as an aviator with the Spanish government forces and brought down six insurgent planes, told a House Military Affairs subcommittee yesterday that American army-trained pilots and American military planes were superior to those of foreign nations.

The youth, now an aeronautical engineering student at New York University in New York City, admitted he "had not done so well" as a U. S. Army Air Corps cadet. But he declared he and his comrades in the Spanish government's air force routed the insurgents in the Guadalajara campaign. Baumler said they turned the tide of battle when they got into action after being grounded by bad weather.

A check-up by Representative Bruce Barton (Republican) New York, on his crusade to repeal a law a week revealed yesterday that Congress had failed to act on any of the 11 repeal bills he has introduced since January. All his efforts to pry the bills out of committee pigeon-holes have failed.

"The trouble is," said Barton," I get no help from the Democrats. They feel that to help me would be to admit their own errors." He said he longed "for the day when the people will send a Republican majority down here and then we will have a grand clean-up and sweep the statute books clear."

W. J. Ballinger, chief economist of the Federal Trade Commission, testifying before the Senate Judiciary sub-committee on the Borah-O'Mahoney bill to require Federal licensing of large corporations asserted many anti-trust cases "have not been properly presented to the Supreme Court." He said if Government attorneys had stressed the economic effects of monopoly they might have won more of these cases.

Statistics submitted by Ballinger showed that between 1926 and 1932 1 per cent of the banks controlled 99 per cent of the Nation's deposits. He declared that in the same period 5 per cent of the iron and steel companies controlled 95 per cent of the iron and steel reserves.

A bill introduced at the request of the Navy Department by Chairman Bland (Democrat), Virginia, of the House Merchant Marine Committee would empower the Government to requisition in a national emergency any aircraft chartered from the Maritime Commission. The requisition would be upon proclamation by the President that a national emergency existed.

A bottle of New Jersey champagne and a peck of New Jersey oysters were distributed yesterday by Senator Smathers, of that State, to each of his 95 colleagues. He told them last week that such fare would enable a man of 70 to jump over a 10-foot fence, but that test was made by no Senator.

Another effort to improve the financial situation of small business men was made by Representative Mead (Democrat), of New York. He introduced a bill empowering banks to make small loans up to $100,000 between March, 1938, and July, 1940, with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation insuring the bank against loss.

A new system of processing taxes designed to raise $200,000,000 annually is being drafted by Senator Pope (Democrat), Idaho, an author of the Administration's farm program. Senator Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, is considering methods of imposing an excise tax on manufacturers or a sales tax to raise between $130,000,000 and $140,000,000 for benefit payments to cotton growers.

3-Inch Pipe Organ Shown Kiwanians At Luncheon Here

A tiny machine world was revealed to members of the Washington Kiwanis Club at luncheon in the Hotel Mayflower.

They were shown an electric motor so tiny it fits in the end of a lead pencil, a playing pipe organ 3 inches wide and 2 inches high and a one-inch pistol.

The exhibition was arranged by Jules Charbneau, who has searched the world for miniatures for his collection.

Other articles displayed were an airplane motor and four-cylinder automobile engine each 2 inches wide, a half-inch safety razor, and a one and a half inch fountain pen.

Townsend Appeals To Supreme Court

Dr. Francis E. Townsend, old-age pension advocate, appealed to the Supreme Court yesterday to reverse the lower court decision which sentenced him to 30 days in jail for walking out on a House committee investigating his activities.

Townsend was sentenced to the jail-term and ordered to pay a $100 fine by the United States District Court when it tried him on charges of contempt of the House of Representatives. The United States Court of Appeals for the District upheld the conviction by a 2 to 1 vote. Townsend left the committee room May 21, 1936, explaining that he was doing so "in view of the apparent unfriendly attitude" of the investigators.

In his appeal, the advocate of $200 monthly pensions for elderly persons contended that the United States District Court had refused to allow him to introduce evidence explaining his walk-out. His petition said that the questions asked him during the three-day examination were "not pertinent to any legislative inquiry but on the contrary were of an intensely personal and insulting tenor."

Injuries Fatal to Man Found Under Trestle

Sidney Nelson, 37, of Chesapeake, W. Va., died yesterday in Emergency Hospital of injuries believed suffered when he fell from a train near the Richmond highway in Arlington County.

Nelson was found lying beneath a railroad trestle Monday. Police so far have not definitely determined whether the man fell, or was struck.

40 Hurt, Nazis Await Orders In Austria Vote

Austria

calling last night for a vote on his policy of Austrian independence against further German encroachments, had broken the understanding reached with Chancellor Adolf Hitler of Germany February 12 in their Berchtesgaden conference.

Under that understanding, Austria's cabinet was reorganized to include five ministers favorable to Germany; political prisoners, including Nazis, were released; and restrictions on the outlawed Nazi party were eased.

(Nazi officials in Berlin were annoyed by Schuschnigg's move while a Vienna dispatch in the Essener National Zeitung reported that Joseph Leopold, Austrian Nazi leader, had been made a member of Hitler's personal staff.

(The report said Hitler desired the Austrian "as one of the most faithful and best experts on Austrian questions to be in his immediate vicinity during the ensuing month, when events of historic importance will transpire.")

(In London, British Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax was reported to have warned German Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop against outside interference in the plebiscite. Von Ribbentrop flatly refused to commit himself, the reports said.)

German Flies to Parley.

Nazis in Graz sent telegrams of protest to President Wilhelm Miklas and Minister of Interior Arthur Seyss-Inquart, a personal friend of Hitler, declaring the plebiscite was against the 1934 constitution. (Unconfirmed reports circulated that Seyss-Inquart had resigned.)

Wilhelm Keppler, German state secretary, flew from Berlin for a conference with Seyss-Inquart and then flew back and two other Nazis hurried to Berlin to report on the situation.

It was expected Austrian Nazis would have orders on the attitude they should adopt toward the plebiscite within 24 hours.

Nazis May Use Force.

As the threat of possible Nazi sabotage and terrorism was bruited in high quarters, three possibilities were mentioned:

1. Nazis might try by force to keep Schuschnigg's supporters from voting.

2. They might boycott the plebiscite.

3. They might continue their activities before and after Sunday as though nothing had happened.

In Vienna at least 11 persons were injured.

Police leaves in Vienna and Graz were canceled; troops moved through the streets of Graz.

In the Stryrian capital, 17 Nazis were injured slightly in street fights, 12 others were hurt by police in breaking up of gatherings, and one was stabbed.

"Heil Moscow!" Heard.

Rival groups went about the city tearing down Nazi or Fatherland Front placards. (The Fatherland Front is Austria's only legal political organization.)

A new note in the bedlam of "Heil Hitler!" and "Heil Schuschnigg!" shouts was an occasional cry of "Heil Moscow!"

Posters filled the streets. Many read: "We are ready for any battle for Austrian independence."

The government radio station interrupted programs frequently with the spoken slogan: "Austrian independence and Austrian freedom are involved. Therefore vote 'yes.'"

Thousands of handbills exhorting the people to vote for a free Austria littered Vienna's streets, sometimes to a depth of a foot.

Traffic along the capital's main arteries almost was halted at dusk as 5,000 men and women milled and shouted.

First Vote Since 1930.

The plebiscite will be the first referendum in Austrian history and th people's first chance to vote since 1930.

It was estimated 4,300,000 persons would have the right to vote, including 2,300,000 women. The estimate was based on the 4,150,000 voters in 1930.

Regulations published in the press stated a printed "ja" (yes) ballot to indicate approval of Schuschnigg's policies would be available at poling places Sunday.

Persons desiring to vote "nein" (no) must write the word on a piece of paper exactly 5 by 8 centimeters (approximately 2 by 3 inches.)

A statement was heard that the Nazis were angered particularly with Schuschnigg's call for a plebiscite because they had planned to demand a vote themselves in about six months after their propaganda machine had started functioning at full speed.

Refugee From Nazi Germany and Family in Capital

or too late" for democracy to bargain with Germany.

"It would have been reasonable," he declared, "to meet Germany halfway at the time before National Socialism came into power, when a peace-loving German republic was to be supported and sheltered.

'Such a meeting of German demands will again be timely after Hitler's fall.

"But at present, any fulfillmen of German demands means a cruel and discouraging blow against those forces in the German people working toward freedom and peace."

May Make Home in U. S.

The hope of "all those who cherish democratic sentiments" is to be found today in America, Dr. Mann said, declaring that his belief in the strength and virility of freedom in this country is so strong he is contemplating making his home here "in the not too distant future."

For the present duration of the European dark age, he declared, the center of Western culture will shift to America.

"America has received much from Europe, and that debt will be amply repaid if, by saving our traditional values from the present gloom, she can preserve them for a brighter future that will once again find Europe and America united in the great tasks of humanity," he said.

Dr. Mann traced the growth of National Socialism in Germany and his own reactions which led to his realization that "I should not be able to breathe in this air." In Switzerland, he said, he has found an honorable democratic haven.

"But now even Switzerland, once an impregnable fortress of humanity, seems to be threatened. Wedged in between German and Italian fascism, it is perilously near the sources of infection," he said.

Only in America does he now find an air almost devoid of the poisons one must breathe in Europe, he asserted. "In contrast to the cultural fatigue and inclination to barbarism prevalent in the Old World, there exists here a joyful respect for culture," he said.

Lecture Applauded.

The chief lesson of the years he spent in Germany during the growth of the Hitler regime, Mann declared, was that "we must not be afraid to attempt a reform of freedom—in the conservative sense."

"I believe it is the duty of every thinking man," he continued, "to take an active part in this task—which is tantamount to the preservation of culture—and to give freely of himself."

At numerous points during the lecture Dr. Mann was applauded liberally by the large audience which filled Constitution Hall to hear him. The applause was especially pronounced when he announced his intention of making his home in America and when he declared democracy more artistocratic than Fascism — terming Hitler and Mussolini "definitely plebeian."

"In virtue of its solidarity with knowledge, truth, and justice, and as the adversary of violence and crudity, intellectual aristocracy is at the same time the spokesman and representative of democracy on earth.

"Real democracy, as we understand it, can never lack a certain element of aristocracy, 'aristocratic' being not in the sense of birth or any privilege, but in the spiritual sense.

"In a democracy which does not honor the higher, intellectual life, and is not guided by it, demagogy has free play and the level of national life is reduced to that of the ignorant and uneducated.

"What should dominate," he declared, "is tthe principle of education, the will to make the lower strata participate in culture, and thus to make the higher level the acknowledged standard.

Bloodshed Not Unavoidable.

"To determine the conception and level of culture from below, as the mob conceives and understands it, that, and nothing else, is demagogy, and we have a classical example of it in the so-called 'culture speeches' of the above-mentioned Feuhrer."

One practical result of these speeches, according to Dr. Mann, was that they "show how low democracy can sink, when it loses that indispensable strain of aristocracy."

The speaker cautioned those who might be driven "by panic to declare for Fascism out of fear of socialism" not to do so. He insisted, however, that Fascist Socialism is a moral travesty of real Socialism, "the theft of a moral and humanitarian idea for the purposes of its propaganda of youthfulness and futurity."

"National Socialism" is an impossible term, he said, because nationalism and Socialism are opposites. "To make a party program out of the two is mentally mischievous," he declared.

Democracy's battles can be won by peaceful labor and without bloodshed, Dr. Mann asserted. There is nothing revolutionary, he declared, in the demand that democracy defend itself "against barbarism and political running amuck of any kind."

"The spirit of man has reached a stage of social maturity which makes war impossible as a political weapon. The tasks before men today are the tasks of peace, and those tasks are great and urgent enough to absorb the whole energy," he declared.

What is needed, he said, is not war but "a reform of freedom which will turn it into something different from what it was, and could be, in the time of our fathers and grandfathers, the epoch of bourgeois liberalism. . . ."

Social Reform Essential.

"The reform I mean," he continued, "must be a social reform, a reform in the social sense. Only by a reform of this kind can democracy take the wind out of the sails of the totalitarian states and win back the start they have got by a youthfulness which is merely transitory and utterly dishonest, but is all the same powerfully attractive.

"And this social reform must apply both to spiritual and economic freedom.

"As regards its renewal from the economic side, we might say what everybody knows—that its moral blemish, the genuine inferiority which permits fascism to pride itself on its idealism in contrast, is the plutocracy in which the bourgeois revolution found a more modern, but not more noble substitute for feudal privileges and inequalities.

"If democracy is to make its unquestionable moral superiority over Fascism historically effective, and call a halt to pseudo-socialism, it must, on the economic as on the spiritual plane, absorb the indispensable elements offered to it by Socialist discipline:

"It must carry on the bourgeois revolution from the political into the economic sphere, realizing that justice has become the dominant idea of the epoch, and its establishment, so far as that lies in human power, a question of the world conscience which nobody can shirk, which nobody can put aside."

This idea of reform, Dr. Mann stressed again, is "not revolutionary," but is "aimed at the preservation of the traditional occidental civilization."

10 Escape in Plane Crash; Two From Capital on Board

Richlands, N. C., March 10 (AP).—Seven passengers and a crew of three aboard a big American Airlines plane heading for the West Coast from Newark escaped injury today when the plane made a forced landing near here and tore down a fence as it was about 150 miles off its charted course.

Peggy Fears, stage actress, the wife of A. C. Blumenthal, theatrical producer, was aboard. Other passengers were:

E. F. Leggett, of 3024 Macomb street, Washington; J. G. Rice, also of Washington; Grove Webster, of New York; Gardiner Fiske, of Boston, and W. M. Zass and Mrs. Northcott, who booked passage in Washington.

Chief of Police R. E. Holt said: "They sure were lucky. The pilot set the plane down in a big, open field but he happened to hit a wire fence across it and took down 50 or 75 posts. They were lucky, too, that the field had not been plowed."

Winter Stages Comeback With Two-Inch Snow

Snow

C., after fighting snow and sleet most of the night.

A high wind accompanied the snow here as the Weather Bureau issued storm warnings from the Virginia Capes to Nantucket, Mass., and south to Hatteras, N. C.

Heavy snow falls and rain were reported sweeping over most of the eastern half of the country.

In Western Maryland 40 plows from the State Roads Commission labored to clear roads and highways of drifted snow. In Frederick County, some roads were reported to be covered with drifts more than three feet high, with even larger drifts in Howard County.

Fair and warmer was the official forecast for today, with a minimum temperature early this morning of about 28 degrees.

A truck driver was seriously injured when his vehicle collided with another in the 1300 block of Southern avenue northwest. Both drivers blamed slippery streets. The injured driver, James Murphy, 20, of Bradbury Heights, Md., was treated at Casualty Hospital for a possible fractured skull, fractured knee and lacerations. R. H. Rice, 23, colored, 303 Forty-fourth street northeast, driver of the other truck, was not injured.

Two other Washingtonians, Dennis L. Healy, 32, 2206 F street northwest, and Elizabeth Belbein, 23, 1017 Otis place northwest, were injured when their car skidded into the rear of a parked truck on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard near Laurel, Md. Healy said he was unable to stop the car because of the icy condition of the road. Both were treated at Garfield Hospital for lacerations and bruises to the face and body.

A pedestrian, Yvonne Bean, 23, 1376 Sheridan street northwest, was injured when struck by a car at Eleventh and F streets northwest. She was taken to Emergency Hospital and treated for a bruised hip and minor cuts to the body. The driver of the car gave his name as Dennis B. Jones, 23, colored, of the 600 block of Rhode Island avenue northwest.

Injured when she slipped and fell on the icy sidewalk in front of a store in the 6100 block of Georgia avenue northwest, Ruth Campbell, 29, 2154 Eighth street northwest, was treated at Freedmens Hospital for a sprained arm.

Four persons escaped serious injury in a bus when it skidded and overturned on State Route No. 2 near Fredericksburg, Va. The driver, Don Browning, told police he was crowded off the road by a Washington car.

Passengers in the bus were Minor Heflin, of Corbin, Va., treated for injuries to the leg, back and head; R. E. Harlow, Richmond, Va., and James Egan, of New York, who suffered shock.

David Lindsay, 34, of Philadelphia, was injured when his car skidded into a telegraph pole on the Lee-Jackson highway, about 6 miles from Fairfax. He was treated at the Alexandria Hospital for severe lacerations to the scalp and possible concussion of the brain.

House Ladies Fight Futilely To Remove Tax on Cosmetics

are on articles shared by men," jibed Mrs. Nan W. Honeyman (Democrat), of Oregon.

"I beseech you to support the amendment," said Mrs. Virginia E. Jenckes (Democrat), of Indiana.

But the men of the House said "No-o-o-o-o!" They said it with loud and thunderous finality that brought natural color to the cheeks of the powder puff bloc. Then Mrs. Norton was back on her feet. She was "ready to compromise," she told the men.

She offered an amendment to cut the cosmetics tax from 10 to 3 per cent.

Lone knight errant among 430 men, Representative John J. O'Connor (Democrat), New York, made a gallant gesture.

"I think," he said bowing, "if you make it 5 per cent you would get more support."

"Very well," said Mrs. Norton. "I propose 5 per cent."

"No-o-o-o-o," thundered the men of the House.

"I demand a division," shouted Mrs. Norton.

The chair divided the "ayes" from the "noes." There were 115 of the latter; only 50 of the former. Beauty had lost again.

"I think it is very funny they repealed the tax on soap and toothpaste, toiletries the men use themselves," said Mrs. Honeyman.

"And I think it is ironical they removed the tax on jewelry and furs that women of small income cannot buy," opined Mrs. Norton.

The men said they took a "realistic" view. The tax on cosmetics will yield $17,000,000.

Rubini Must Keep His Marriage Vows

Los Angeles, March 10 (AP).—Violinist Jan Rubini, under the terms of an unusual reconciliation agreement filed with the county recorder today must "remain true to his marriage vows" for two years in order to retain his wife, Adele Rubini.

The agreement also provided for dismissal of other litigation, including the Rubinis' contested divorce action, Mrs. Rubini's $50,000 suit for alienation of affections against Actress Terry Walker and the latter's $100,000 damage action against Mrs. Rubini.

A NEW WASHINGTON POST FEATURE

Political Potpourri

BY FRANKLYN WALTMAN

Commencing this Sunday and continuing every Sunday throughout this colorful by-election year, Franklyn Waltman will write for The Washington Post a weekly review of what is happening on the far-flung political front. His review each week will be a real potpourri—a medley and mixture—of the important and significant—the insignificant and humorous—the human touches, ambitions, jealousies and hatreds which make American politics the exciting, all-absorbing attraction that it is. He will probe weekly behind the scenes to ascertain the currents and cross-currents which are influencing and directing the 435 Congressional election fights, the 34 Senatorial battles and the 32 contests for State Governorships. He will seek to appraise the part which the New Deal, the foreign situation, labor's bitter factionalism, the industrial recession, and many personalities play in these contests. As he goes along he will undertake to appraise the bearing all these events and the outcome of this year's primary battles and final election will have on the fortunes of the Roosevelt Administration and the Presidential prospects of parties and men in 1940. And he will not forget the Messiahs—those colorful but relatively unimportant figures on the political stage who propose to be the saviors of the Nation—and really believe they can.

Anyone even remotely interested in politics cannot afford to miss this new feature. Frequently there will be news in it about what is happening in your State—New York, Indiana, Kentucky, Illinois, Maryland, Virginia, Washington, Utah, North Carolina, indeed from time to time about every State. But every week it will supply you with a background of what is happening throughout the Nation in politics which will enable you better to understand the trends shaping up during this transitory period in American life.

Political Potpourri will be written in the clear, concise, vigorous style of Franklyn Waltman, chief of the National News Bureau of The Washington Post, author of the Post's thrice-weekly column "Politics and People" and a close and keen observer of the American political scene for more than a dozen years.

Political Potpourri will appear in Section III of this Sunday's Washington Post and every Sunday until election day in November.

D. C. May Adopt Dewey's Plan in Numbers Drive

Nichols Gets Copy of N. Y. Gambling Act to Study After Conference.

The New York law relating to the numbers racket and the trial methods of Thomas E. Dewey in obtaining convictions of operators will be studied on Capitol Hill and at the District Building in a new drive inaugurated yesterday.

Upon invitation of the Commissioners, Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, and three leading citizens attended a conference at the District Building. The citizens are Robert V. Fleming, president of Riggs National Bank; Frank R. Jelleff, president of Frank R. Jelleff, Inc., and a member of the parole board, and Francis G. Addison, vice president of the Board of Trade.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal also attended. Another meeting will be held Tuesday.

New York Act Studied.

Nichols declined to discuss the conference, but District officials said he had been given a copy of the New York gambling act to study. If he approves it, he probably will propose it as a substitute or parts of it as amendments to the bill on which hearings are now being held by the House District Committee.

A suggestion that District judges might be brought into the investigation was made at yesterday's hearing by Representative Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts.

Bates remarked there appeared to be a lack of co-operation between the police and the courts and added:

Schulte Assails Judges.

Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, said "if the judges were on their toes, we wouldn't need this bill."

Richard R. Atkinson, a colored attorney, warned the committee that the legislation would lead to the harassment of "a lot of poor people, especially the colored people," while failing to touch the higher-ups behind the racket.

Nichols suggested the discretionary fine for first offense conviction under the bill ought to be changed to a mandatory jail sentence. A 60-day minimum, he said, might be sufficient.

Meanwhile, Gregg Robinson, colored, 35, of the 1000 block of P street northwest, was arrested and charged with operating a lottery. He was taken into custody at Tenth and P streets northwest.

Laundry Parley Delegates Named

Three women, representing the employes of the dry cleaning and laundry industries in the District, yesterday were named to the wage conference by the Minimum Wage Board.

The wage conference, which will hold its first public hearing next Tuesday, will attempt to fix a basic minimum wage for about 4,500 women workers in the industry.

Representatives selected for the employes are Mrs. Lily Brooks, a widow, of 2460 Eighteenth street northwest, employed by the Tolman Laundry; Mrs. Sara Lyons, colored, a widow, of 228 G street southwest, an employe of the Blackstone Laundry, and Miss Lena Hawkins, colored, 30 Hanover street northwest, an employe of the Premier Cleaners & Dyers, Inc. Miss Hawkins also is a member of the cleaners and dyers union.

Arlington Sentence Of Driver Upheld

Richmond, Va., March 10 (AP).—The State Supreme Court today upheld Arlington Circuit Court's involuntary manslaughter conviction of Gordon A. Bell, of Clarendon, under which he must serve a two and a half-year sentence in the State penitentiary.

In the lower court the State contended Bell's car was being driven "in a careless and reckless manner" and "at an excessive" speed when it struck and fatally injured Jessie Cooley on the night of February 1, 1937, as she was leaving a community card party at Clarendon.

More Judges For D. C.

Washington has a vital interest in the bill reported to the Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday providing for the creation of 12 additional Federal district judges and seven additional justices for the circuit courts. For the local courts the bill provides two district judgeships and one additional justice for the Court of Appeals.

Hearings on the bill featured Senator King's criticism of Federal judges for not working hard enough. In some cases the Senator's complaint can doubtless be sustained. It seems particularly inexcusable for the courts to remain in recess during September, in spite of the fact that Labor Day usually marks the end of the vacation season. A change in this custom seems to be in order. But that does not obviate the urgent need for more judges in the District.

It is doubtful whether the present number of judges could bring the calendar up to date in any circumstances. Failure of Congress to provide for more judges would not likely result in speeding up the work of judges now on the bench. Rather it would tend to penalize the public by extending the delay in bringing cases to trial. What is needed is both more judges and shorter vacations. Even if it were possible to speed up the present organization to handle all cases awaiting trial, it would be highly undesirable to rush the courts faster than good judgment can operate.

The most effective plea for more judges here came from the Judicial Conference composed of senior circuit judges and presided over by Chief Justice Hughes of the Supreme Court. "In view of the increasing number of cases and the impossibility of bringing the dockets up to date with the present judicial force," said the last conference report, "and having regard to the character of the work and the future needs of the District, the conference recommends that provision be made for three additional judges for the District Court for the District of Columbia."

Provision for additional judges is particularly essential if Washington is to cope with its disgraceful crime record. Speedy trials are known to be an effective deterrent to crime. Under present conditions, however, assignment of sufficient judges to hear criminal cases without undue delay means a greater accumulation of untried civil suits. The situation would doubtless be relieved to some extent by the appointment of two additional judges. But partial relief is not enough when justice and effective law enforcement are at stake. The full Judiciary Committee may well restore the third judgeship for the District, as recommended by the Judicial Conference.

Brazil's Foreign Minister.

The appointment of Dr. Oswaldo Aranha as Brazil's foreign minister should once and for all dispose of the false belief, at one time very widespread in this country, that the largest of Latin-American republics has gone Fascist.

Actually there never was the slightest evidence that either Germany or Italy had anything whatever to do with the coup d'etat carried out by President Getulio Vargas last November. He was moved to assume dictatorial powers out of purely Brazilian considerations. And while his action was, for a time, hailed with enthusiasm in Berlin and Rome as marking the extension of the totalitarian principle to the New World, this enthusiasm has since waned and for excellent reasons. Not only has Vargas wiped out the only Fascist-like movement in Brazil—the green-shirted Integralistas—but his government also has suppressed Nazi and Italian Fascist formations that had sprung up in the republic during the last few years.

The appointment of Dr. Aranha, for the last three years his country's Ambassador in Washington, indicates that Brazil is determined to cling to its Pan-American moorings and, in particular, to work in effective harmony with the United States. One of the ablest Brazilian statesman of our time, Dr. Aranha has always been an ardent advocate of closer relations between his country and ours. He knows the United States and has never concealed his friendship for it. Dr. Aranha is a man of truly liberal views. His appointment suggests that the Vargas dictatorship may avoid the extremes of personal government to be encountered in the dictator-ridden nations of the Old World.

The only regret that will arise over Dr. Aranha's appointment is that his entirely deserved elevation to the post of foreign minister ends his tenure as Brazil's Ambassador to Washington. During his three years' stay here he made a great host of friends and admirers who will miss him deeply. But the feeling of sincere regret at his departure from Washington will be offset by the realization that as foreign minister Dr. Aranha will to an even greater extent than hitherto be able to work for increased Brazilian-American friendship. He also can be counted on to do his bit to cement the ties of peace binding all the republics of this hemisphere in happy association.

The Next Step Is Clear.

The specific issues at stake in the TVA controversy, whether they take the form of irregular leases, illegal expenditures, or mere incompatibility of temperament between members of the directorate, are matters of very great public importance, on which light is urgently required. But even more vital than the facts involved is the procedure to be used in probing the truth of the grave charges which have been made.

For solving difficulties of this character, the American system of government fortunately offers a well-tested and time-honored formula: It has been employed for decades, irrespective of the political party in office. It has yielded, over the course of years, such excellent results in the form of habitually honest government as to draw pages of tribute from all objective students of our political institutions. The formula, of course, is that of the Congressional investigation.

The Congressional investigation, and more particularly the Senatorial investigation, is important for other reasons than its long record of tangible accomplishment. The Teapot Dome exposure, resulting in the retirement of three members of President Harding's Cabinet, remains an outstanding example of the results this form of inquiry can achieve. But if the whole list of such inquiries were named, the essential value of the procedure would still be incompletely revealed.

The importance of Senatorial investigating committees cannot be measured either by the scandals they have unearthed or the graft they have averted. In a government where the legislative and executive functions are separate and distinct these bodies provide one of the few forms of parliamentary control insuring that the American system of government shall remain really democratic. This power of investigation, if resolutely exercised, is nothing less than a guarantee against executive dictatorship.

It is not accidental that this fact has been so much remarked by foreign writers on our political institutions. Trying to find the agency which corresponds to parliamentary control of the executive in Great Britain or France, these detached observers have seen the Congressional investigating committee with a comprehension denied to many who have not had opportunity to examine governments comparatively.

Thus we see Prof. D. W. Brogan, of Oxford, in his stimulating book on "Government of the People," referring to these investigating committees as "one of the indispensable driving belts of the American system." Their value, he says bitingly, will never "be questioned by anyone who still thinks that corruption should be kept down to a bare minimum." And, summarizing the opinions of other writers, Prof. Brogan concludes that the Senatorial investigation committee "has provided an effective means of control, has informed public opinion and has considerably augmented the power of Congress."

It may or may not prove true, as Senator Norris predicts, that "on investigation it will be found that many things which have been said (about TVA) are groundless." But no exception can be taken to the Senator's statement that "now the matter has been taken to the public." This being the case no recourse other than the Congressional investigation is possible, assuming that a wise and vital tradition of American democracy is to be observed. The matter having been taken to the public, the elected representatives of the public must probe the facts. No evasion of that responsibility can honorably be considered.

To derive the most satisfactory results, this investigation must be placed in the hands of the Senate. As Prof. Lindsay Rogers points out, in his standard study on that organ, the Senate, far more than the House, possesses the independent outlook, the freedom from political domination and the capacity to probe deeply which the present situation obviously demands. For the most ardent friends of the TVA now agree that only a thorough investigation can clear away the suspicions which the charges of its chairman have aroused.

The assertion of Senator Norris that "neither friends nor enemies of the TVA should investigate it" is convincing, provided it does not mean a disposition on the part of the Senator to mistrust the honesty of his colleagues, and therefore the very basis of democracy. But the neutral attitude cannot, of course, be carried to such lengths as would put the inquiry into the hands of the Federal Trade Commission or any other executive agency. One can imagine what Senator Norris himself would have said to such an illogical proposal if it had been advanced at the time of the Teapot Dome investigation.

For the same reason the importance of President Roosevelt's meeting with the TVA directorate today must not be overstressed. It is thoroughly appropriate that the Chief Executive should consult with his appointees and elicit, as he says, the facts in the matter. Indeed there would have been administrative wisdom in taking this action months ago, at which time the present open break between Chairman Morgan and his associates might have been averted.

Now, however, executive action alone will not suffice. As Senator Norris says, "the matter has been taken to the public." Elected representatives of the public, balanced as to their political affiliations, must now assume the duty so clearly imposed upon them by the traditions, the structure and the practice of our form of government. The next step is clear. Efforts to avert it could only serve to deepen and exaggerate suspicions beyond the point at which they may be allayed.

The House Wakes Up.

Rejection by the House of the proposed penalty tax upon the undistributed earnings of closely held corporations brings encouraging evidence of a newly awakened regard for the effect of experimental tax measures upon business.

It merely confuses the issue and distorts the facts to denounce this so-called "third-basket" levy as outrageously oppressive and discriminatory. In fact, as a proposal for reaching the taxable income of shareholders in closely held corporations, a very good theoretical case can be made out for the tax.

Representative Doughton, for instance, asks: "Why should undistributed earnings be held any more sacred than distributed earnings? We have had," he continued, "a tax on distributed earnings for many years, and when a closely held corporation does not distribute its earnings, there is the widest kind of discrimination and this is the discrimination we are endeavoring to eliminate here." In other words, he believes that stockholders in a widely held corporation, which is under greater pressure to distribute its earnings than is a limited family concern, are discriminated against by existing arrangements.

The House, however, was thinking in realistic fashion about the effect of the proposed tax upon local enterprises which have been built up throughout the United States by reinvestment of earnings. It was very plain that any Congressmen thought it much more important to encourage this process of reinvestment than to try to force the distribution of withheld earnings just to make sure that a few large shareholders did not escape surtax payments.

Congressman after Congressman pointed out that in his particular community closely held family concerns had expanded over the years by a process of reinvestment. To suggest levying a penalty tax upon such concerns because of non-distribution of earnings seemed to them to be playing into the hands of big corporations, to be encouraging absentee ownership and to be giving aid and comfort to monopolistic aggregations of capital. In short, they saw in this third-basket tax proposal an assault upon independent business seemingly running counter to the professed desires of the Administration to encourage decentralization of industry and capital.

Moreover, there was a widespread fear that application of the proposed tax to a limited number of closely held corporations would cause alarm among smaller businessmen. This unusual sensitivity to the effect of proposed legislation upon business sentiment strengthens the hope that Congress will hereafter think about the long-range economic effect of its tax policies. Too often in the past it has been carried away by doctrinaire insistence upon securing maximum taxation of large incomes regardless of the effect upon capital accumulation and business enterprise. At a time when funds for expansion of business are so hard to obtain, it would indeed be ironical for Congress actively to discourage the process of reinvestment by resort to punitive taxation.

In those cases where earnings are withheld, not for bona-fide investment purposes, but to avoid surtax payments on personal income, the remedy lies in strengthening the existing provisions of the law designed to prevent tax avoidance. The fact that the problem is difficult does not warrant imposing penalty taxes upon all large closely owned corporations, few of which are guilty of tax avoidance.

Love Among The Reds.

Ah, sordid mystery of the Moscow treason trials, at last we've found thee! Genrikh Yagoda, former head of the secret police, has confessed that he had "personal" as well as "conspiratorial" aims in conniving the death of Maxim Gorky's son. This the Comrade Winchells of the Red Square have easily translated to mean that he was that way about the wife of the murdered man. So, 'tis love that finally emerges as the first comprehensible motive for the intramural shootings and poisonings that have blighted the Russian scene.

Small wonder that Stalin's five-year plans have been bogging down with OGPU heads mooning over faithful blondes instead of blotting out faithless moujiks. To be effective, collectivization evidently may not stop at farms, but must go the whole way and include femmes as well. In any case, the dreadful monotony of recent stories from Moscow can now be expected to vary.

It will not be former commissars this time who will be reported as consigned to a firing squad. Instead, an utterly beardless fellow with small wings and no pants will have been marched out to meet his doom. And the name of Tovarich Cupid will have been added to the Kremlin's dripping list of victims.

During recent years bridge has been changed from a game to confusion, and now some smart fellow has added a fifth suit to it and converted it into chaos.

Today's Teaching.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Dr. W. H. Kilpatrick says schools are inculcating stupidity and are developing competition as the main motive of life. If they are doing this, how did they come to do it?

The best old-fashioned schools took for granted that man will reach for a star. They put hard tasks before the pupil and let him experience the thrill of solving them. They taught worthy subjects. The fashionable dispensation today commands: Do not teach the subject, teach the child—teach the child what is useful. The stars themselves are reduced to the level of usefulness. Pupils used to race for a star. The new faith has done away with the star and left the race, i.e., competition. Pupils strive no longer for the mastery of a subject, but for grades and credits.

This is stupid, indeed. But are either the pupils or the teachers to be blamed? Who cares, nowadays, whether a teacher's wagon is hitched to a star! Breeding and taste, human maturity and kindliness, a broad culture and a thorough mastery of subject matter are not prerequisites for a teaching certificate. But 15 credits in education are required. Education with a capital E is a bookish thing which is manufactured in ever new models by the Great Educators who never educate, and which is substituted for genuine learning and common sense by poor little teachers who have never been educated.

Intelligent criticism could point out that only the mature can teach. Teachers' colleges could be organized accordingly, by courageous leaders. But it would take time, and stupidity wants speed.

American Party Proposal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In answer to a "South Carolina Democrat," who suggested an "American Party" in The Post of March 8, may I say that there is something pathetic in the naive individual who still pins his faith to a party — American, Republican, Democratic, or whatever label you want. A land filled with such credulous masses is lush ground for a dictator.

If you are going to demand that the Government solve all your problems, you are demanding a dictatorship. Democratic government depends upon the people. Here is the only solution: A return to human, old-fashioned business ethics by big business; patient, courageous understanding of the masses; more statesmanship and less bid for glory among our legislators; an awakening of common decency among our middle class which will prevent their lying to get relief and old-age pensions when they are not actually in need; willingness of the laborer to do a day's work for a day's pay; a spirit of co-operation to supplant this hysterical hurling of accusations, this passing the buck to the other fellow.

One of the most shameful phases of our democratic government is the way we persecute our President. Constructive criticism is always wholesome, but blind political hate, coupled with a steadfast refusal to face facts, is undermining our Constitutional form of Government, not him.

When The Sirens Blow.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When I learned to drive a car, back in 1912, there was a rule in the traffic regulations which I thought was good, and I fail to understand why it was repealed. I presume it must have been repealed.

The rule to which I refer is that motorists shall pull over to the curb and stop when the fire engines are heard. I still obey the rule. Maybe I am just old-fashioned. Nevertheless, there are one or two others who still hang on, even though most cars seem to be spurred to greater speed at the sound of the sirens.

Just last night on New York avenue near First street northwest the drivers of the fire trucks had to thread their way cautiously through a stream of speeding traffic in order to prevent serious accident.

I move that the rule referred to be put back into the traffic regulations. Can I get a second?

An English View.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The talk put over the radio by Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, was one of the most logical we have heard for some time—touching upon the democracies of the United States and Great Britain as against the "isms" of other nations.

We raise our hats to Secretary Ickes and there is no doubt about it that in him you have a real good man.

The Poet Laureate Of Washington.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Native Washingtonian" is right in stating that the poet laureate of the District of Columbia should be born in Washington, D. C.

I was born in the Nation's Capital, and was acclaimed poet laureate of the District of Columbia years ago by the Poet Laureate League of America, and many prominent people via radio, etc., I won the gold first prize in Troubadour Magazine Contest, in competition with other outstanding poets of the District.

For further reference as to my claim to the laureateship, all interested may consult "The Encyclopedia of American Biography, 1936" (American Historical Society, Inc.) with full page photo on page 218. "Who's Who in the Nation's Capital," "Who's Who Among North American Authors," "Best Poems, 1927" (Dodd-Mead, N. E. J. IRVINE.
Cincinnati, Ohio, March 4.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recently, The Post printed a splendid letter the gist of which was that a poet laureate should be appointed in the District. To the substance of that article I would like to add a few thoughts extracted from a circular issued by the Academy of American Poets.

Contrary to current belief, the genesis of a great poem is not necessity, but inspiration. The number of poets who make a living writing poetry can be counted on your fingers. True creative genius, when oppressed by financial worry, cannot give its best to the world. Let it be pointed out that the superlative work of outstanding scientists is often financed by large endowed institutions, and that there are scholarship and fellowship funds available in all the major colleges to be used to finance the study and work of deserving students.

Therefore, it should be understood by all that if the production in America of great poetry is to be encouraged, the poet must be made financially independent. Otherwise, he will be forced to allocate most of his time to more lucrative pursuits, which all too often stultifies his talents. The establishment of a poet laureate fund becomes imperative, if we would desire that the appointee engage in no occupation incompatible with poetic production. To accomplish this aim, the fund should not be less than $3,500 per annum. Of course, it will not be bestowed upon anyone possessed of an annual income equal to or exceeding this figure.

Needless to say, I am certain that the selection of a poet laureate for the Nation's Capital will be a very warmly welcomed event. Every literary-minded reader of The Post should aid so worthy a project.

The National Symphony.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am not one of those who control the destiny of the National Symphony Orchestra, but I have been listening to its concerts now for over five years, and I have marked, with pleasure and even pride, its growing proficiency and its constantly increasing ability to produce great music as it should be performed. So it was something of a shock to me to read "Permanent Subscriber's" letter in The Post March 8 and to learn that there are concert-goers in the city to whom their orchestra's attainments mean so little that they consider a desire for fine performance merely as "somebody's whim."

The budgets of practically all the first-class symphony orchestras of America are larger—some are twice as large—than what the National Symphony asks for. What "Permanent Subscriber" suggests is to cut it down to the standards of a second-class orchestra. How long does he think the best players would be content to sacrifice their musical career and remain with a dwindling second-class orchestra?

It is not just personal ambition, either, which gives good musicians the desire to live with the best music. Artistically, they cannot be asked to put up with inferior performances if they are capable of getting and giving the best. And this applies as well to any conductor who loves his art.

"Permanent Subscriber" seems to feel that the Orchestra Association, by trying to give only good music to Washington, has arbitrarily "put something over" on him. There are approximately 800 members of the association, all of whom have a vote in the orchestra's affairs. New members are welcomed. There is no endeavor made to keep the association in the hands of a few. If "Permanent Subscriber" is not yet a member, why doesn't he become so and get the opportunity to make his constructive criticism heard in meeting?

Personally, I feel that when an orchestra has reached the high standard of artistic performance of ours we should rather help shoulder the responsibility of keeping it there and not let it down.

"Universal Rome."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "There is a Fascist map of 'Universal Rome' which includes all the empire of the Caesars—and more," writes S. Miles Bouton in The Post.

I certainly would like to see that map. In order to make it a reality, Mussolini would have to conquer and annex England (but not Scotland and Ireland), France, the Netherlands, Belgium, the south of Germany, Switzerland, Austria, Hungary, Rumania, Jugoslavia and the whole of the Balkans. All these dominions were parts of the former empire on which, no doubt and for good reasons, he has no designs.

He may hope to regain only the remainder. This means Spain and Portugal (very unlikely), the whole of North Africa, from the Straits of Gibraltar to the Suez Canal, and Asia Minor up to and including Mesopotamia. In accomplishing this, if and when, he would create merely a "Mediterranean empire." And that's work enough for 70 dictators.

Housing For Reliefers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been reading quite a lot about the deplorable conditions which exist in the slums of Washington. I am quite sure that all of these poor souls are on relief.

When the Government or an individual real estate company builds homes to rent at very moderate rentals, can these victims move in one of them? No, they are told that no one on relief need apply. If one who is not on relief happens to make out an application, his credit rating must be perfect; he must also give them his life's history. How can anyone have such rating when he has to live worse than a dog?

Hit And Run.

WHENEVER I am in an automobile, I am unalterably convinced that people who still cling to the primitive use of feet are, by and large, idiots.

Whenever I am on foot myself, I am dead sure (almost literally, most of the time) that the majority of motorists are victims of still more dangerous forms of mental deficiency, ranging all the way from delusions of grandeur to criminal insanity.

If one could but fix with any degree of surety, to say nothing of safety, a place for observation and contemplation somewhere between the pedestrian and the motorized viewpoints, perhaps some more or less accurate conclusion regarding the dismaying difference in human behavior caused by gasoline might be reached.

What changes a usually polite and considerate man into an oaf who drops his manners as quickly as a strip-tease virtuosa does her clothes (or used to) the minute he takes the wheel?

What happens to a driver that transforms him from a peaceful individual into a furtive and crafty law-breaker once he is out of the traffic cop's range of vision?

Consider further the one who has a neighborhood reputation as a doting father yet tears, as furiously as the horsepower of his car permits, through groups of playing children!

Or the pillar of society who hits it up to 60, 70, 80, on unwatched getaways because he personally considers 45 miles an hour entirely too low a limit!

And how about the noble lords of fashionable creation, the hostesses' joys, the precious "extra men," who spurred by the horrible fear of being five minutes late at a dinner or bridge game, risk, maybe a score of lives in their deadly determination to beat traffic?

By far the best analysis of this strange and terrible phobia, which last year strewed the countryside with 40,300 dead and 1,221,090 injured, I have ever come across is in Du Bose Heyward's novel, "Lost Morning" (Farrar & Rinehart, 1936).

The section referred to—chapter 20—at first gives the impression of an unwarranted digression, but the way in which Mr. Heyward suddenly builds it to an exciting climax and at the same time uses it to point up the bitter irony of his story, is in itself a tribute to his skill in narrative that fuses physical and subjective elements.

Jerry Enfield, the character about whom this episode is built, has not before assumed any importance in the tale. One has met him as a rich country club idler, pleasant and a good sport—a familiar and popular type, strongly sketched in from the start. He is not, though, very impressive as an individual—until he jumps into his car one moonlight night for a solitary run across the Southern landscape which Mr. Heyward interprets so eloquently.

Then, in a flash, he becomes at once emphatically individualized and the symbol of every potential hit-and-run killer in the world.

"He settled himself in the seat, feeling with a conscious, almost sensual, release, his nerves relax." Away he sped—80 then 90—"feeling exultingly the old sure sense of mastery . . . a sense of power merging his identity with that of the machine."

One part of his mind was automatically fixed on the road; the other wandered through its own universe, small, like any man's, but infinite all the same.

Speed, speed; always more speed.

Suddenly a challenge from the rear as a car roared up, seeking to pass.

Enfield's assurance of power, his blind and arrogant certainty of superiority, rejected violently the possibility of being left behind. Madly the cars rushed on, the inches between them diminishing. Enfield saw death at hand, but he did not slacken; by a miracle the crash was avoided and he was brought back to reality by "the loud jeering, slightly drunken, laughter of youth" as the other car shot ahead.

Completely demoralized by his defeat, he kept on and did not realize he had reached the edge of the town.

All at once "he was conscious of a slight jar and instantaneously got an impression of an object flying back, feather-light, from his front fender across the sidewalk. Then he had passed and before him the street lay, commonplace, familiar, deserted . . ."

Later, he learned that he had killed the mistress of one of his best friends, but by this time his ego had built up a complete self-defense; and when he further discovered that circumstances pointed to the woman's suicide, every intention of confession vanished.

The last seen of Enfield he is making his getaway. "At first there was a slight unsteadiness discernible in his driving, but that disappeared as the great car gathered speed and bowled away northward."

Fair Enough

Libel Proof.

Los Angeles.

LAST NOVEMBER 9 Paul Wright assertedly shot and killed his wife and a man described as his best friend as they reportedly embraced in the drawing room of Mr. Wright's home. Mr. Wright reputedly had been drinking and allegedly had fallen asleep in another room. Reportedly, however, he awakened, and on re-entering the drawing room was so shocked by the asserted spectacle that describedly he quickly seized his reported gun and while blinded by a reputed white flame executed capital punishment on the statedly erring twain. The it-is-said slayer was arrested and tried three times, but won his freedom by the best two out of three decisions in the Los Angeles courts and believedly is now seeking to rehabilitate himself in society.

Suspectedly, among the newspaper craft in the southern zone of California and to a less extent elsewhere these days, it is a release from responsibility for libel or error in journalism to qualify assertions or suggestions of alleged fact with such forms as "assertedly" and "reportedly," and these strange growths are now locally confirmed by usage and toleration as legitimate by newspapers.

Supposedly this is a revival and an explanation of the old-fashioned and generally discarded journalistic use of the word "alleged" as a fire escape from responsibility, and on being tested in court the whole vocabulary of new immunities may crash expensively as "alleged" did some years ago. However, it is thoughtedly, or thinkedly, libel-proof to date, and your correspondent is conducting this experiment on an assumedly open-and-shut case, high police officials believe.

• • • •

MR. WRIGHT'S defense was two-fold. He was not guilty because he did not do the asserted killing and not guilty because he was claimedly insane when he did that which he did not do. In the first trial the jury rejected his contended innocence and found him guilty of manslaughter. But in the second trial the same citizens believed his story of the described white flame and vindicted him on the ground of insanity. There followed then a third performance, or trial, to determine whether this insanity was temporary or lingering, and the verdict was that the purported white flame was but the matter of an instant. He was crazy only for the duration of the presumed two homicides, and a week ago a Los Angeles paper chronicled his release—with a prayer in his heart, while Sabbath bells tolled the faithful to worship. Mirrored in the tragic lines of his gaunt face was the terrific ordeal he had passed through. So thankful that he could hardly talk, after almost three months of confinement, he had only this to say, "I want the world to forget me."

Owing to an unfortunate omission or lack of space, there was no mention of the grim, gray walls or any intimation of stark tragedy—a plain case of short measure on the part of the paper. The citizens of Los Angeles are understanding and tolerant, however, and will forgive the omission as they forgive Mr. Wright and doubtless will forgive, at a future date, an unhappy Negro who chargedly shot and killed two law officers who went to his little cabin to dispossess and evict him for purported default of his alleged payments.

• • • •

THE NEGRO rumoredly was so frantic at the thought of losing his family's little shelter that he fetched his contended gun and describedly fired, and there is naturally great sympathy for him, although, in the absence of the sex element, he may have a more difficult time with a Los Angeles jury.

The defense in this case, it is hopedly, will introduce a distinct scientific novelty—the black flame—and on a date not far in the future the newspapers predictedly will repeat that to understand is to forgive, and report that while Sabbath bells tolled the faithful to worship the black-flame slayer walked out of the county jail a free man, police believe.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Letters That Will Never Be Delivered.

(No. 675—To the man who will be chosen soon as a general manager of the stock exchange.)

Dear Sir:

Just a line to sympathize with you over your appointment as boss of the stock exchange and to express our belief that it is a good job if you hold it for the long pull. Ordinarily when any man gets a job with salary attached these days it is an occasion for congratulations, but the man who gets the task of skipper of Wall street in the present stormy seas has his work cut out for him.

• • • •

The decision to appoint a czar of the stock market proves that things are so confused nobody knows whether the market comes under the heading of an outdoor sport or an indoor amusement, and I think that beside your job the jobs of Will Hays and Judge Kenesaw Landis are mere recreation periods. In pictures Hays can always blame it on a producer and in baseball Landis can always satisfy the fans by fining a left-handed pitcher.

• • • •

I don't know what you intend doing, but your first task will be to sell the stock exchange to the public, to the Administration and to the operators at one and the same time. What you will be expected to do will be to put in an all-glass front, install an automatic ethical-conditioning system and do what you can to convince the public that the stock market is not only wholesome and nutritious but contains vitamins A, B and C.

• • • •

Primarily your job will be to emphasize honesty. This is difficult in the present era because so much harping is being done on honesty that it makes even the possible converts suspicious and, while I think the average broker is as honest as the next fellow, it will be up to you to put him across as the soul of ethics until both Washington and the public come to think of a broker as a man who is the very person to mind the baby, lead the choir or fill in for the organist.

• • • •

Anyhow, give these ideas your attention and accept my best wishes, and as soon as you perfect an idea for something that will keep stock brokers from snoring on duty, let me hear about it. Yours truly,

ELMER TWITCHELL.

P. S.—Is there any truth in the report that one ticker moved last week and 24 brokers jumped out of their seats screaming "Stop that riveting!?"

Bluebird in the Garden.

There's a bluebird in my garden,
A song is in my heart,
Though the Japs are bombing China
In a war that didn't start.

There are pirates off Gibraltar,
There is trouble on the sea—
Still the bluebird's in my garden
And my soul is filled with glee.

Stocks are jumpy down in Wall street,
There's inflation in the air—
Still the bluebird's in my garden,
And he doesn't seem to care.

Loyal Spain is fighting Franco,
Both the Nazi and Fascist,
While Hitler forced an "Anschluss"
Without bullets in the East.

Still the bluebird's in my garden,
And it's there I hope he'll dwell,
But if war breaks out in Europe
They will need him there as well.

Eden Versus Chamberlain

British Foreign Policy Said Fundamentally Revised.

By David Wills.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

THE EDEN - CHAMBERLAIN controversy has temporarily eased itself through the resignation of Mr. Eden on what he calls a matter of principle, of fundamental difference of attitude, and on what Mr. Chamberlain calls a matter of mere detail involving no principles whatsoever.

Mr. Chamberlain wants to hold conversations with Italy to resolve the antagonisms between Britain and Italy, without requiring from Italy any credentials, evidences of good faith, or hostages whatsoever. Mr. Eden agrees that differences between Italy and Britain should be settled, but requires first that Italy should give evidence that she is of a mind to keep any commitments which she may make.

Mr. Eden's attitude is well known, his principles clear. Mr. Chamberlain's attitude is unknown, his case unargued, his diplomatic methods unseen. To the great many English who believe in the ideal of collective security expressed through the League of Nations, Mr. Eden is a Knight in Shining Armor; to the extreme right he is a belligerent and fanatical idealist. Mr. Chamberlain is a magnanimous, courageous realist to his supporters, a fascist reactionary conspiring to sell out democracy to the dictators, to his enemies.

Press Shortcomings Clearly Demonstrated.

THE ARGUMENTS for the Chamberlain and the Eden policies are incredibly confused in England; the present crisis has demonstrated most dramatically the shortcomings of the British press. Those papers which favor Chamberlain, from whatever motive, are headlining the enthusiasm of Rome and Berlin for the resignation of Eden, and are suppressing adverse comment from the empire and from the United States.

The would-be responsible Daily Telegraph proves that American opinion is whole-heartedly behind Mr. Chamberlain, except for some inhabitants of Eastern cities descended from recent immigrant stock. Add misinformation to suppression, and to Mr. Chamberlain's secretiveness and the underground methods of those who have worked for Mr. Eden's ejection, and the British public is puzzled to know just exactly what the issue is. Perhaps the best way to explain the crisis is to put the most plausible arguments for both parties.

Take first the best case that can be put for Mr. Chamberlain's determination to have at all costs an agreement with Italy.

The Rome-Berlin axis is an inherently unstable device invented purely for its nuisance value; it was made not to live but to sell. Germany is by far the most powerful and menacing of the two dictator powers, both now and potentially. And Germany's plan of expansion threatens Italy as much as the rest of Europe.

Germany is now ready to seize Austria. Hitler has bullied Schuschnigg into granting the Austrian Nazis control of sufficient weapons of government to make Austria an extension of Germany. The immediate occasion of this act is supposed to have been the imminent exposure of Hitler's active assistance to an Austrian Nazi plot to stage a provocative act in Vienna as excuse for German intervention; the Nazis were to burn the German embassy, shoot the German military attache, or repeat in some such form the device of the burning of the Reichstag building.

But whatever the cause, Hitler has gained the first step to control Austria. It is rather puzzling to know why he did not at once complete the process by marching Nazis to Vienna; the way was open, and nothing succeeds in Hitler's experience like a fait accompli. Maybe Mussolini, for all his public silence, sent a private statement of his interest in Austrian independence.

• • • •

Speech of Fuehrer Abusive of Democracy.

ON TOP OF this partial seizure of Austria came Hitler's speech—uncompromising, aggressive, abusive of democracy and Britain. The democracies do nothing to protect Austria. If they are unable to find a reply, what happens next? Before long, maybe in a few weeks, Hitler finishes off the Austrian job by securing complete Nazi control. Italy, weakened by war in Abyssinia and Spain, and by the strain of supporting a large army in Libya, with no friends in the west of Europe, dare do nothing.

With Austria gained, and Hungary rapidly drawn into the German field, Czechoslovakia's position is completely undermined. The road is clear for Germany to extend her agitations into Rumania and into Prime Minister Chamberlain.

Yugoslavia, and German hegemony of central and southeastern Europe is complete. And once that hegemony is securely established on a firm economic basis, Germany is ready to dictate to France, and Europe succumbs to the rule of German National Socialism.

That, so runs this statement of a case for the Chamberlain policy, is the prospect for Europe, and beside it war in Spain and recognition of Abyssinia as an Italian colony are trifles. To prevent German domination of Europe, Austrian independence must be preserved, and this must be done immediately. Delay of even a few weeks may be fatal.

The only country which can effectively resist German seizure of Austria is Italy. Between eastern and western Europe runs an almost impassable barrier: the Franco-German fortified frontier in the north, neutral Switzerland in the center. Only communication is from France through Italy. The west can counter German influence in Austria only through the intervention of Italy. And unless Italy gets the immediate buttressing support of Britain and of France she is helpless to intervene.

• • • •

Britain Urged to End Differences With Italy.

THEREFORE, Britain must at once settle all outstanding differences with Italy. Italian and British imperial interests do not conflict in any fundamental manner, so runs the argument. We can easily afford to grant Italy's case for some share in control of the Mediterranean, even of the Suez Canal, can wink at Italy's intervention in Spain, can recognize Abyssinia, and can seal the bond with a large loan, if in return for these concessions we break the Rome-Berlin axis, and put Italy in a position to halt Germany's impending seizure of Austria.

To follow up this protection of Austria, Italy and Britain can then promote a Danubian confederation, and can permit the necessary economic adjustments which in the past have been blocked by Britain, who insisted on her full treaty rights of most-favored-nation treatment and opposed any exclusively close economic relations between the Danubian countries. With a Danubian confederation consolidated, and Austrian independence protected, Europe is safe from German domination, for Germany will not face war with the powers of the west.

If this is a correct statement of the issue, and if it is concluded that England must approach Italy as rapidly as possible, naturally it follows that there must be no attempt to require guarantees of good faith from Italy. The past must be forgotten and agreement must be reached as between equals.

Argument of Eden-ites Claims False Premises.

ACCORDING TO a statement of justification for the Eden thesis, the whole of the preceding case for Chamberlain is based upon false premises.

European peace, according to the alternative case, can be based only upon the principles of honesty, faithfulness to treaties, collective security. There must be no retreat before the bullying aggressiveness of the dictators. The Rome-Berlin axis is not to be broken by any bribes to one of the members, and to enter into negotiations with Italy because she has a nuisance value is to invite still further blackmail both from Italy and from Germany.

Italy, following out this argument, is now in acute economic distress. The burden of her three large armies is becoming intolerable, her foreign exchange problem is acute, and before long the slow grinding of economic forces will undermine the whole fabric upon which she has based her contempt for the organization of collective security and for the power of Britain. This then is no time to rush to her rescue.

On innumerable occasions in the past we have received Italy's undertaking to various agreements, and on each occasion she has broken her undertaking as it suited her convenience. Of what use is it to start yet another set of conversations, reach yet another agreement, when the value to be put on her undertakings is precisely nothing?

England Must Rebuild Confidence of Europe.

BRITAIN must not jettison what remnants are left of the League of Nations, to whose undoing she has herself been the major contributor, but must at once act to rebuild European confidence in that system. It is humbug for Chamberlain to state realistically that the smaller nations must no longer look to a league to defend them, since it lies in Britain's power to rebuild that league.

This, on the Eden argument, she should do, and since the advance of Germany into central Europe would at once be stopped if Britain declared her willingness to implement all her League obligations, Britain should at once make that declaration. This would be far more effective in securing European peace than any construction of a balance of power with Italy. And with that declaration made, Britain could well afford to let Italy be overtaken by her own nemesis, and could stand willing to assist the chastened Italy which would emerge.

And if Britain holds these principles she must not open conversations with Italy as if Mussolini had never broken any of his obligations for European peace, but should wait until Italy is willing, as a result of a realization of her own impossible position, to stop intervention in Spain.

Peace cannot be built by condoning war, nor security by submission to threats.

Chamberlain Believed Ignoring Large Dangers.

THOSE WHO adhere to this theoretical statement of a case for the Eden policy have their replies to the Chamberlain outline. First, Mr. Chamberlain, it is argued, has no intention of safeguarding central Europe, but has only the much more limited and selfish aim of buying off the Italian threat to British Mediterranean interests. This lack of support for a central European policy would be so evident to Hitler that he would treat any act of Italy's to protect Austria as mere bluff, and would proceed undeterred to his conquests.

Second, even supposing that Hitler was bottled up in his present territory by an agreement with Italy, what guarantee is there that he would become reconciled to his position? It is not inconceivable that Germany and Russia might find it profitable to sink their differences and ally themselves together for the promotion of world revolution. For between National Socialism in Germany and Bolshevism in Russia there is now no fundamental difference. Both are dictatorships, intolerant of criticism, both practice state control of economic affairs, both believe their doctrine to be of international validity. Russia has been deserted as an ally by the democratic powers, and if Germany finds herself in isolation she may think it advisable to come to agreement.

In other words, the Chamberlain program, even at best, is merely an attempt to buy off a present threat, which must end in war. And that war may even be hastened by the conversations with Italy; for Hitler, knowing the purpose of the conversations, may forestall them by acting at once, within the next few weeks, to control Austria before any support for Italy can be provided.

Delay and Idealism Scored in Rebuttal.

TO THE EDEN argument, the Chamberlain case has its reply. The situation is extremely urgent; there is no time to talk of the ideals of collective security, which, after all, are merely sentimental phrases useful only for electioneering purposes. If Europe is to be saved, or, rather, if Britain is to be saved, we must have allies, and immediately. To refuse now to settle up with Mussolini is to court war.

Further, if we can agree with Mussolini, we can agree with Hitler, once he realizes that he is not to be allowed to get away with a European war. We may have to make some colonial concessions to Hitler, but these will be a small price for peace. And so, as a rosy hope at the conclusion of the Chamberlain argument, lies a peaceful association between Britain, France, Italy and Germany—a four-power pact.

This conclusion naturally is particularly discouraging to the democrats of England, who see in it the addition of England to the dictatorial circle; democratic dictatorship, of course, since it is the British character to be democratic, but dictatorship for all that.

The argument between the two policies discloses one thing at least; the issue between Mr. Chamberlain and his late foreign secretary is no matter of detail, but a fundamental alteration in the foreign policy of Britain. For some years the Conservative government has nicely straddled between collective security and power politics. The former is now abandoned, although it is still uncertain whether Mr. Chamberlain is pursuing some consistent policy such as that outlined above for him, or is merely following wherever his nose may lead him.

First Lady Says Women Unequal to Presidency

Albuquerque, N. Mex., March 10 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, said here today she couldn't "imagine why any woman would want to be President."

"Not at present, anyway," she told interviewers, "no woman with an idea of the vast demands upon the Presidency would be eager for the job."

Union Head Asks Study Of Station Broadcasts

J. P. Jones, president of the United Mine Workers, Western Maryland District, yesterday said he had asked the Communications Commission to investigate certain broadcasts by Station WTBO in Cumberland, Md.

The broadcasts included those by a "commentator" and a speech last Monday by the Rev. Dan McNally. Jones objected to statements made in the broadcasts.

Ideas On Personnel Management.

PUBLISHERS HAVE BECOME profuse lately in advice to business executives on how to get the maximum service from their employes. Apparently the unionization of mass-production industries, the political accomplishments of labor and changing economic factors have created new personnel problems on which management seeks enlightenment. The old literature in the field, most of it written before the advent of regulatory legislation and before collective bargaining became a reality, is evidently inadequate for modern needs.

Among the new books on employer-employe problems are "Personnel and Labor Relations," by Dale Yoder, professor of economics at the University of Minnesota; "Human Nature at Work," by Jean L. Shepard, director of executive personnel for a New York department store, and "Multiple Management," by Charles P. McCormick, Baltimore manufacturer.

• • • •

THE MOST COMPLETE discussion is offered by Dr. Yoder. He contributes nothing to the theory of personnel management, but he presents a vast fund of information in typical text-book fashion. Generously illustrated with statistical tables and Greek letter formulae, his book describes the practices employed in industry for the selection and placement of employes, analyses of jobs, promotion and transfer, and determination of wages, hours and working conditions.

While Dr. Yoder is inclined to regard his talk as simple exposition of what has been done and what is being done, he also makes suggestions for development of sound labor policy. He argues that collective bargaining is to be taken for granted as a permanent feature of industry and urges managers to enter sincerely into the spirit of collective bargaining and not merely conform to the letter of the law. Dr. Yoder writes:

When employers undertake collective bargaining unwillingly and with an obvious desire to begrudge every step in the process, no objective observer could expect that a fine, co-operative enthusiasm would characterize the workers who emerge from the process. If management is forced to conclude the agreement only by the threat of continued strikes, if it concedes employes' rights to bargain collectively only because it is forced to do so, as was the case when certain automobile manufacturers were coerced into collective bargaining in the spring of 1937, the ensuing relationship is unlikely to prove particularly satisfactory. If, on the other hand, management bargains collectively without obvious prejudice, if it indicates a willingness to co-operate in the process instead of stalling, if it "lays its cards on the table," then an entirely different reaction may be anticipated from employes.

Dr. Yoder reports that there is a general reaction against the paternalistic welfare programs which was characteristic of personnel management during the 1920's. Simultaneously, he says, there is growing recognition of the demand that problems of industrial relations be handled in an impersonal manner, that employes be regarded as groups rather than individuals and that their welfare as a whole be made the definitive issue in the evaluation of managerial policies for dealing with workers.

• • • •

MRS. SHEPARD'S BOOK, "Human Nature at Work," gives special attention to the problems of individual adjustment in industry and business. She recommends various techniques of hiring, placing new employes, giving recognition, criticizing, arousing ambition and training. The book contains a variety of case studies concerning individual problems which the author met in dealing with employes during her association with department stores. Her advice on how to manage workers is sound but scarcely profound. At times it borders on the platitudinous. In her discussion of the problem of morale, for example, she writes: "Morale ebbs when there are executives who quarrel among themselves, so that whole departments are ranged in opposition and inner dissension prevails." It is a sad reflection on the intelligence of business managers if they have not already discovered this fact and must have it expounded for them in elementary form.

• • • •

THE BOOK OF MR. McCORMICK describes the author's experience in developing advisory boards of employes to aid in shaping management policies. The plan which he applied in his Baltimore plant centered around a junior board of directors, a factory executives' board and a sales board. These bodies have the duty to study problems in their respective fields and recommend improvements to the senior board of directors. By "multiple management" the author means the sharing of managerial responsibilities with these boards.

Mr. McCormick's scheme—which he claims has reduced labor turnover to a minimum, developed a new co-operative spirit among employes, reduced working hours, raised wages and improved methods of production and distribution—is a form of employe representation, but it involves employes only in the higher brackets of skill or subordinate officialdom. Only indirectly does his plan reach into the ranks of semi-skilled or unskilled labor and attempt to get an expression on some of the matters which directly affect the wage earners. Nevertheless, Mr. McCormick prescribes his plan as an antidote for unionization and also for mismanagement. He writes:

Certain authorities have said that unionized labor is the answer to mismanagement. I do not know whether this statement applies in all instances; but we have proved that multiple management in the factory not only makes unionization unnecessary, but discourages attempts at union organization.

• • • •

WHILE THE THREE BOOKS vary widely in scope and point of view, all are in virtual agreement that the human factor in industry must be given increased attention if maximum efficiency is to be attained. They indicate that sound management does not regard labor as a commodity to be bought as a quantity of raw materials but that laborers and employes generally are persons with a variety of human rights, privileges and needs. They indicate also that these requirements must be satisfied not by grudgingly given concessions from officials but by carefully considered policies shaped with due regard to all interests at stake.

Cashes In On Fake Books

Ubert Urquhart has made a profitable profession out of fake books, making the sections of spurious books on display in department store windows and elsewhere. Fortune magazine recently published a report on this distinctive business.

His manufacturing technique is simple, Fortune reports. For a section of books he uses only the backbones, which he attaches to a heavy sheet of cardboard and then stuffs with corrugated paper to achieve a fat, genuine look. He buys bookbinders' overstock. For separate volumes—the kind you can take out of the shelf and hide things in—he uses the complete cover and glues it around a paper form that simulates the pages of a book.

He charges $2.50 a foot for his books and gets from eight to ten to a foot. Stores, hotels and apartment houses throughout the country are his big customers. He frowns on orders for private homes, holding that every home should have an accumulation of real books, gathered through the years; he will take them, however.

One customer was Mrs. Will Hays, who didn't want a lot of good books around the Hays summer cabin in California. Such deceits Mr. Urquhart takes philosophically, recalling the time a publisher sent out an edition of the complete works of Shakespeare only to find that one whole section of pages was printed upside down in one of the plays.

The firm sat tight and waited for the inevitable complaints and demands for replacements. They're still waiting. Apparently no one ever looked inside.

Ickes, Willkie Trade Insults In TVA Dispute

TVA

at the first meeting it is probable the municipalities would defer construction activities for the proposed 60-day period.

This aspect of the TVA controversy, however, had no direct relation to the situation which inspired President Roosevelt to summon the agency's three directors—Chairman Arthur E. Morgan, Dr. Harcourt Morgan and Lilienthal—to his office today to justify what they have been saying about each other. The President said earlier in the week he would insist on facts—and not opinions. Mr. Roosevelt's stern attitude when announcing this meeting led some observers to believe he may demand the resignation of Chairman Morgan. But the President denied prejudging the case.

Rep. Bacon Hurls Charge.

Directly related to the White House meeting today and the battle in Congress over demands for an investigation of TVA was a statement issued last night by Representative Robert L. Bacon (Republican), New York. Demanding a TVA investigation and not by the Federal Trade Commission, Bacon referred to a report "that in at least one instance advance information on Director Lilienthal's yardstick power rates apparently assisted certain persons friendly to the Administration to manage very profitable operations in the stock and bond markets."

Bacon said the instance which had come to his attention concerned Lilienthal's first announcement of the so-called yardstick rates on September 14, 1933. Although that announcement was not released to the press until 6 p. m. that day, Bacon asserted, "the price movements in certain utility stocks and bonds earlier that day suggest a very probable connection between Mr. Lilienthal's rate decision and some market quotations involving power companies contiguous to the TVA area."

The New York Representative said he had been told the Justice Department had made "some inquiry into this leak." He said he thought the department's findings should be made available to Congress. He asserted he also had been told that there had been some discussion in the TVA board of this "stock market leak on the yardstick rates" and that on that occasion "Mr. Lilenthal threw his influence against a formal inquiry to trace out the source of the leak to the market."

"The Congressional investigation of TVA is demanded," he asserted, "not only to establish the names and connections of those who may have enjoyed advance information touching Director Lilenthal's official decision, but also to establish the outcome of the Attorney-General's investigation of that incident."

Norris Wants His Laurels.

There was no further public discussion on Capitol Hill of the TVA situation yesterday, except for a brief speech by Senator George W. Norris in the Senate, satirizing the story of Wednesday's Senate debate in The Washington Post by Sidney Olson. Norris' point appeared to be that Olson had depicted Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, as coming off victorious in the debate, whereas Norris believed he and Bridges' Democratic opponents took the oratorical laurels.

Efforts on Capitol Hill to force an investigation of the TVA were held in abeyance pending the White House conference today. Meanwhile the Ickes blast held the TVA spotlight for the day. The Interior Secretary made his observations in a telegram to Mayor Watkins Overton of Memphis, Tenn., who had asked whether the Willkie suggestion about deferring PWA advances would interfere with that agency's allotment of $3,092,000 to his city.

Replying that if Willkie meant the PWA should not make any new commitments, his condition already was met since the President sometime ago ruled out further PWA allotments, Ickes said that "if, on the other hand, Mr. Willkie is asking the Government to fail to live up to the contracts which it has made with cities in the Tennessee Valley, it would appear that he is not conversant with the policy that PWA has always followed."

"It has always been the policy of the Public Works Administration," Ickes continued, "to co-operate with other Government agencies, and as early as 1934 we co-operated with TVA in an attempt to avoid duplication of facilities in several Tennessee Valley cities. These attempts were not only unheeded by Mr. Willkie, but his lawyers accused us in court of 'conspiring' wtih TVA. Having failed completely to prove his case in the courts, Mr. Willkie now, in effect, asks us to 'conspire' with him and to refuse to carry out our obligations to the cities in order that he may negotiate with TVA. Mr. Willkie has had five years in which to negotiate, but he chose to exhaust every legal technicality in his efforts to thwart the Government's policy. Now that he has been beaten at every hand, he asks the Government to act in bad faith with the cities."

House Boosts Liquor Tax 25 Cents a Gallon

enue, and C. F. Stam, committee counsel. The Senate committee at present is predominantly opposed to the undivided profits tax principle.

Bickering over revenue yields of the amended bill broke out in the House before adjournment last night. Representative Robertson insisted his liquor amendment would raise at least $35,000,000. He based this figure on estimates by Parker. Between $30,000,000 and $45,000,000 was believed necessary to meet the shortage caused by defeat of the penalty tax.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the Ways and Means Committee, said the liquor tax rise would increase revenues by only $19,000,000. He quoted Undersecretary of the Treasury Roswell Magill as authority for the estimate.

$41,000,000 Lacking.

Meanwhile, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., told reporters the bill Wednesday night was $41,000,000 shy of the revenue needed after the House deleted the closely held corporation penalty tax.

Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, whose successful attack eliminated the penalty provision, denied the bill now carries any less revenue than when originally reported by the Ways and Means Committee. He said it was $22,000,000 shy at the outset.

Using Morgenthau's estimate of a $41,000,000 revenue shortage, McCormack said it meant that elimination of the "third basket" tax actually cost only $19,000,000. This, McCormack contended, was fully "made up" by the 25-cent liquor tax increase and the $5,000,000 estimated yield from excise taxes on imported pork.

Tariff Requests Defeated.

A last minute rush to levy new excises on imports ranging from beer to dairy products brought from Representative Fred Vinson (Democrat), of Kentucky, the charge that the House was attempting to "write a tariff bill on the floor." All except the Robertson liquor impost and excises on imports of pork, fell by the wayside.

Sectional lines were drawn in sharp contest when Representative J. Harold Flannery (Democrat), from Pennsylvania's coal-producing regions, proposed a one-cent per gallon additional tax on fuel oil, which he said would raise $170,000,000. It had the support of House Whip Pat Boland, also of Pennsylvania, but members thundered their disapproval and later turned it down in a standing vote, 125 to 25.

Pork Imports Increase.

New excise taxes on imported pork and pork products were approved after Representative Chester Thompson (Democrat), of Illinois, told members pork imports were increasing "alarmingly." He said pork imports from the free city of Danzig had jumped from 1,648,000 pounds in 1934 to 74,682,000 pounds in 1937.

Robertson, a member of the Ways and Means Committee marshaled strong House leadership support behind his plan to increase the Federal liquor levy.

Among those who took the floor to back it was Representative John J. O'Connor, of New York, chairman of the House Rules Committee, who said the liquor tax should be raised to $3. It was a Republican, Representative Everett M. Dirksen, of Illinois, who first warned the bootleg traffic is on the increase.

Fears Bootleg Return.

"Progress is being made in curbing illicit distilling, but this will mean the bootlegger will come back," said Dirksen.

"And don't think for a moment the distillers are going to pay the tax. Indeed not. Consumers are going to pay it, as they always have."

O'Connor took sharp issue with this. "The tax on liquor has never affected the price," he said. "It bears no relation to it. As for bootleggers, they were in control of the liquor industry before repeal, and probably still are."

Bureau of New Plays to Announce Contest Winners In Second Playwriting Competition Next Tuesday

Project Sponsored by Seven Major Picture Producing Companies, with Theresa Helburn at Head, Provides Vital Stimulus to 'Unknowns;' Ethel Barrymore Colt an 'Actress-Manager;' Notes of Theater.

TWO PRODUCERS, an actress and a professor of drama now are judging the final rounds in the competition of contestants' manuscripts submitted by college students and recent graduates for the second play contest of the Bureau of New Plays.

They are Sawyer Falk, professor of drama at Syracuse University; Ina Claire, Washington actress, recently seen in her home town of Washington in the premiere of Frederick Lonsdale's new comedy of "Once Is Enough," and Delos Chappell and Alfred de Liagre, jr., producers—the former of "Father Malachy's Miracle," starring Al Shean; the latter of "I Am My Youth," also seen recently at the National with Charles Waldron, Linda Watkins and Frank Lawton in the leading roles.

BELL.

The winning plays will receive awards from the Bureau of New Plays, which is sponsored by the seven major motion picture producing companies. Awards will be announced in the morning newspapers of March 15, which is by way of being next Tuesday. A program has been arranged which will be broadcast over a coast-to-coast network at 6:15 p. m., next Tuesday, with John Anderson, New York critic, as master of ceremonies. A scene from one of the winning plays will be enacted by leading actors in the theater. Mr. Anderson also will interview two or three of the award-winning authors.

Theresa Helburn, director of the Bureau of New Plays since its founding two years ago, will report on the work done by the award winners of last year's competition since that time.

This matter of the New Play Bureau's activities is brought up here, from time to time, because it seems to offer the most promising outlet for the inspiration of untried authors with aspirations in the direction of distinction in the field of playwriting that the theater in America affords at the present time. The recession of "the road," the virtual relegation of "stock" to the limbo of forgotten things and the submergence of vaudeville as a source of creative talent seem to leave this earnest quest of new blood for the theater, being pursued by the Bureau of New Plays, the most vital "intravenal" tonic the theater can boast.

Ethel Colt, who has a supporting role in "Whiteoaks," starring her mother, Ethel Barrymore, at the National Theater next week, has a more thorough knowledge of theater management than most actresses of her years. Spurning the easy opportunity to gain recognition behind the footlights on the strength of her Barrymore name, Miss Colt got her training the "hard way" by touring with the Jitney Players. For three seasons she managed the troupe in its motor tours of 36 States. She has taken time out from this arduous duty, now and again, to appear in George White's "Scandals," with Rudy Vallee; "L'Aiglon," "London Assurance" and other Broadway productions.

The easiest way to convey the latest news of the impending presentation in Washington of Cole Porter's latest musical comedy, "You Never Know," costarring Clifton Webb, Libby Holman and Lupe Velez, with Toby Wing featured, is to quote verbatim the letter just received from Claude P. Greneker, the Shuberts' right arm, dated New York, March 9. To wit:

"Dear Nelson: I have been wanting to thank you for the several very nice stories you have written about 'You Never Know,' particularly the one which appeared in your column the day after I saw you; also the account of the opening in New Haven.

"I am just back from Boston and saw the show on Monday night. Of course, I saw it in New Haven, too, and am, therefore, in a position to say that it has been vastly improved. You might print, if you like, that Mr. Porter has written a new song for Libby Holman, who, in the present routine, makes her first appearance toward the end of the second act. Now I believe, she will make her entrance in the first act, which is as it should be. Mr. Porter also is writing a new song for Clifton Webb, which is to be sung before the curtain, as a sort of prologue. Both, I think, will be ready for Washington.

"Lupe is terrific. She gives a fine account of herself and surprises everyone by the expertness of her performance. Our business in Boston is extraordinary.

"Will probably see you next week. Sincerely,

(Signed) CLAUDE P. GRENEKER.

So now you know—although you may have forgotten that "You Never Know" is the attraction to be presented in the National Theater the week beginning Monday, March 21.

Reserved seats for the Tuesday night opening of "Mayerling," costarring Charles Boyer and Danielle Darrieux now are on sale at the box-office of the Belasco Theater, which relights its marquee at that time with this enthusiastically heralded French masterpiece of the cinema. The seat sale, as a matter of fact, opened yesterday. After the Tuesday night premiere, "Mayerling" will be presented continuously daily, after the customary policy of all motion picture houses that adhere to the traditional "all day grind."

When you view "The Goldwyn Follies" on the screen at the Palace—which will not be until after Sonja Henie has completed a second week in "Happy Landing"—you may agree with others that Andrea Leeds, cast in the principal feminine role in the film's romantic trends, recalls the Janet Gaynor of the days of "Seventh Heaven." She does, more or less. But, it seems to me, there is about her something that is hauntingly suggestive of Tallulah Bankhead. To these eyes, Miss Leeds is more Miss Bankhead than she is Miss Gaynor, although she is, needless to say, neither one, either in method or personality. Miss Leeds is Miss Leeds a thing wholly sufficient unto herself. But she does look like Tallulah Bankhead. Not that it matters.

This bronchial business that has started the frogs croaking in my throat, set the buzzers going in the ears and otherwise added new wheezes to a cacophanous occupation, necessitated the cancellation of the Arthur Godfrey cocktail party in honor of Frank Parker, who debuted in "Traviata" Wednesday night; the sod-breaking luncheon, given by W. E. S. Wilcox, in celebration of his new Silver Theater, and the honor of addressing the Freshman Forum of George Washington University Wednesday night. Therefore, the promise that there would be "more of this later" will have to go by the board—whatever that is. But all of the kindly messages that have come in from deluded souls who don't know how lucky they were are deeply appreciated—especially the one signed F. Movie Name Taken From Story by Poe

The tragic mystic verse of Edgar Allan Poe so inspired Annabella, the French star of "Baroness and the Butler" that she went to one of his saddest stories for the movie name that she uses.

As Anne Carpentier, her maiden name, she was playing bit roles several years ago in French films when she read "Annabel Lee." The poem haunted her so much with its sad beauty that she decided to use Annabel as her trade name. She later added another "la" to make it more musical.

Veteran.

J. Carrol Naish, the perennial screen villain who appears next in "Her Jungle Love," is a native-born American, but before coming to Hollywood was better known on the stage of Europe than that of his own country. He played virtually every European capital.

Planes to Fly Fast as Sound, Engineer Says

700M.P.H. Proved Feasible in Tunnel Tests, Lampton Reports.

Planes soon will streak through the near-stratosphere nearly as fast as sound, G. T. Lampton, of Williamsport, Pa., Aviation Manufacturing Corporation, technician, told delegates to the National Aeronautic meting of the American Society of Automotive Engineers yesterday.

"Aircraft flying 500 miles an hour and better are just around the corner," he asserted.

The tremendous speed would be achieved on airplanes operating at extremely high altitude, where resistance is reduced to a minimum he explained.

700-Mile Speed Shown.

Sound travels at somewhere between 475 and 550 miles per hour, but in a specially built high speed wind tunnel of the national advisory committee for aeronautics at Langley Field, Va., speeds of 700 miles per hour can be demonstrated.

Lampton assumed that high speed planes of the future will fly in the stratosphere. Under the rarified air conditions there, the "shock wave" will not appear until terrific speeds have ben atained.

Such planes would make possible regular transatlantic service, and it would be possible to reach and attack an objective before the enemy could organize its antiaircraft batteries.

Lampton said, however, that the weights of both land and sea planes would continue to increase until the aircraft engines could be entirely submerged in the wings.

No Limit to Engine Size.

"Propellers," said he, "tend to limit aircraft engine power. We are now up against the requirements that call for sizes of propellers well in advance of present design.

"There appears to be no limit to the size of aircraft engines other than the courage of the industry."

The Bureau of Air Commerce has developed a single instrument which will guide air transport pilots between cities and bring them to safe landings in bad weather, Irving H. Metcalf, bureau radio engineer, told the delegates. It traces on the windshield a visual pattern which shows not only the altitude of the plane with relation to the ground, but also its position as regards runway and the proper glide path to be followed for a perfect landing. Considerable work still is needed on it before it becomes adaptible to practical use, he added.

Beauty Not Star.

June Marshall recently was judged the prettiest stand-in in the motion-picture industry. It's small wonder, for June as a stage and screen stock actress a few years ago was noted for her beauty. Currently she's standing in for Ann Sheridan in "Little Lady Luck."

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., March 10.—At 8 a. m. Imogene was giving me a manicure. At 8:30 John, my hairdresser, was primping me for the evening. At 9 a. m. I had a fitting on my party dress. At 10 I did my Hollywood column. Then I was picked up by the Basil Rathbones and off to the races.

HEDDA HOPPER.

We passed unbelievable remnants of devastation. In the Riverside section we passed what used to be Earl Callum's $150,000 English mansion. But the Los Angeles River is now flowing gently by that spot, leaving not one trace of man's handiwork.

We finally reached the track where fashions competed with the horses for the spotlight. I don't have to tell you the girls looked like old-fashioned bouquets in their gay prints and pastel wools. One of the smartest wore a gray blue tailored suit with two leis of carnations. At home we called them "pinks." They came by Clipper ship from Honolulu.

Mrs. Jack Conway's hat, costing $14 in Paris—would have cost $45 here—made on her head by Suzy, was a French idea of a Mexican sombrero. Around her neck she wore a gold mesh chain and dangling from the ends were two huge bunches of jeweled grapes.

Mrs. Hal Roach wore her new gold shells, tipped with diamonds and a pearl in the center, tandem fashion, up and down, instead of side by each.

But the star of the afternoon was Stagehand. Multiply any thrill you've ever had by a hundred—that will give you some idea of my sensation when I saw that gallant 3-year-old romp home. Have you ever gone to the theater expecting to see a great star, but the understudy came on and gave a finer performance? Well—that's what Stagehand did.

We left the horses at Santa Anita and followed the crowd to the old barn dance at the Ambassador Hotel.

Soon after we arrived we were right back in the stables again. Because when Earle Sande was presented with the Gold Cup, his pals prevailed upon him to sing "When I Grow Too Old to Dream." He came down the home stretch and ended on a big note just like Stagehand. Joe Mankewicz, across the table, said: "Gee whiz, he sings like he trains!"

The million-dollar entertainment matched the crowd. And I'd like to tip my special hat—which I haven't got yet—to Bing Crosby and all the others for their endless patience and work putting it on.

Bob Hope, the talk of the town since "Thanks for the Memory" in "The Big Broadcast," was nominated the white hope for master of ceremonies at special events.

The producers had their eyes on Roma Vincent, who did a superb imitation of Charles Laughton—he sings, too.

That pretty Florence George, making her debut in "College Swing," was dressed in white satin and fox, and wore Everett Crosby on her arm.

Maid Salvages Trash in Fire, Loses Clothes

15 Engines Fight $5,000 20th St. Blaze for an Hour.

Fifteen pieces of apparatus yesterday were used to fight a $5,000 fire in an apartment house at 1731 Twentieth street northwest in smoke so thick that a colored maid "just couldn't see my hand before my face."

The fire broke out in a store room in the basement and climbed upwards through bathrooms on the four stories. Firemen battled the blaze in the walls for an hour.

Louise Thomas, the maid who couldn't see her hand, said: "I ran out of the place as fast as I could. I grabbed something when I ran, and it turned out to be the trash. All my clothes stored here got burned up."

Eight Playgrounds' Openings Delayed

Inclement weather will delay opening the District's eight school playgrounds from March 15 until April 1, Miss Sybil Baker, supervisor, announced yesterday. She said she had received a report from the Weather Bureau that the rest of this month would be unsettled.

Price Stays Executions Pending Sanity Tests

Richmond, Va., March 10 (AP).—Gov. Price today signed stays of execution for Jasper McNeil and James Jackson, two colored men who were scheduled to go to the Virginia electric chair tomorrow to pay the penalty for murder convictions.

The governor's order gave the condemned men until March 25 to be examined by the State Mental Hygiene Board, which is to report on their sanity.

Charleston, W. Va., March 10 (AP).—Gov. Holt said today he would grant Orville Adkins and John Travis stays of execution if the Supreme Court had under consideration their appeal on March 21. Both are under sentence to be hanged that day for kidnaping Dr. James I. Seder, elderly retired minister of Huntington, W. Va.

Hair Darkened.

Gene Raymond's famed yellow blond hair has been made four shades darker for his role with Olympe Bradna in "Stolen Heaven."

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, March 10.

CELEBRATION: After Toscanini's final broadcast Saturday night, a party was tendered in his honor at the home of David Sarnoff. The guests assembled in a room which had been transformed into a night-club setting. John Royal, vice president of N. B. C., was head waiter, wearing a wig and mustache . . . The opening number was a can-can, performed by six socialites, one of whom did a strip tease . . . Zimbalist played the accordion during a Russian number, while Walter Toscanini, the maestro's son, danced a kozotzki . . . Marc Connelly was master of ceremonies and enacted a skit with Joan Wetmore, in which he shot her for sneezing during a broadcast . . . Sarnoff, president of R. C. A. and chairman of the board at N. B. C., dressed in tights, pink pants and spangles, brought out his Flying Sarnoffs, a quintet of acrobats. He was the strong man of the pyramid act and did flying somersaults—real and good ones.

• • • •

LOSS: Last week Miss Naldi, of the dance team of Ray & Naldi, performing at the Rainbow Room, was saddened by the loss of her Scottie, which disappeared from a car parked in front of the building . . . Nelson Rockefeller heard of the loss, went downstairs and told the cabbies: "If you men don't find that dog within 48 hours, I'll cancel your franchise." . . . Within 48 hours, the Scottie was located and returned.

• • • •

COURAGE: Mayor William Kane of Woburn, Mass., who stracted front-page publicity by advocating that the town drunks be placed in tiger cages, visited New York last week-end. Radio Newsreel wished to present him on that program as a mayor who had evinced great courage . . . Before the broadcast, Kane was escorted to the Casa Manana by one of the program officials, and there saw the Proske's Tigers act—wherein Proske enters a cage full of tigers. "I got a great idea," the mayor insisted. "I want to go into that cage and pose with the tigers. What a stunt! It ties up with my tiger-cage idea" . . . "Not before the broadcast," the official placated. "After."

• • • •

DEFEAT: Last week Publisher Max Schuster of Simon & Schuster entrained for Hollywood for a month's vacation. Because of the floods, his train was rerouted . . . Yesterday Schuster marched into his New York office, walked past his surprised associates, straight into his private room. Two minutes later he emerged and walked out again—exclaiming: "I forgot my rubbers!"

• • • •

ECONOMY: An efficiency expert employed by RKO walked through the studio in Hollywood after hours and noticed some lights burning on a garden set—although no person was in sight. He switched off the lights and then reported this obvious extravaganee . . . The next morning the studio officials received another report—that $500 worth of rare fish, placed in the garden's pond, had died during the night because of lack of heat the lights had been supplying.

• • • •

CHATTER: James J. Walker's plans for broadcasting have been altered . . . Sinclair Lewis won't make any more lectures for the next ten years. At present he has ideas for two more plays . . . Eastern Air Lines won't join the others in the plan offering free plane trips to wives who accompany their husbands . . . Friends of Justice Cardozo are urging a Congressional enactment to provide a pension for him. Cardozo isn't wealthy, and, because he's under 70, the benefits of the new retirement act do not apply to his case . . . Prof. Albert Einstein will collaborate with Leopold Infeld in a book which will attempt to explain his Einstein theory. It will be called "The Evolution of Physics."

• • • •

FAME: Monday night a young man tried to enter the RKO Building here but was stopped by the superintendent. After lengthy argument, a message was sent upstairs to Leo Spitz, head of RKO. Spitz gave the messenger a pass for the young man—and that's the only way Pandro Berman, new executive producer at the RKO studios, was able to enter the RKO Building.

• • • •

FREEDOM: The American Civil Liberties Union, which Mayor Hague described as a Communist organization, has sent a letter to the National Labor Relations Board—urging a modification of the decision in the Henry Ford case, in so far as it restrains Ford from expressing anti-union opinion.

• • • •

SWANK: Last week Jock Whitney, who usually travels to California by plane, decided to make the trip a leisurely one, and in ultra comfort . . . He therefore used the private Whitney car, attached to the train making the usual run . . . It was comfortable all right, except that—because of floods—he awoke to find his car detached from the train . . . and stuck on a siding in Utah, for almost 48 hours.

'American Union' Plan Sponsored By Two Nations

By the United Press.

Governments of Colombia and the Dominican Republic Wednesday jointly sponsored a project for an "Association of American Nations," intended to give a formal treaty basis to inter-American relations and facilitate co-operation with the League of Nations at Geneva.

The proposal was submitted in the form of a draft convention to the Pan American Union Governing Board, for transmittal to governments of the American republics, preparatory to consideration at the eighth conference of American states, to be held at Lima, Peru, next December.

The association would function through a Pan-American Congress, representing the American Republic. It would have the authority to act as a tribunal of conciliation in controversies among the American republics. A permanent secretariat would be established.

Navy Genealogist Gets First-Hand Christening Job

Mrs. James Paul Casbarian, who, for some 20 years, has delved deeply into genealogical records to find names and sponsors for Uncle Sam's warships, is going to get a first-hand chance to put her research efforts into practice—she has been selected to christen the U. S. S. Saury.

She was picked for the job by Secretary of the Navy Swanson yesterday. Mrs. Casbarian, a native Washingtonian, lives at 1654 Monroe street northwest.

She is to christen a submarine now under construction at the Electric Boat Co., Groton, Conn. The vessel is to be launched July 30.

The Navy Department selects as sponsors the nearest of kin to the man honored in naming a new craft. Mrs. Casbarian traces the family trees of these persons and submits a geneslogical chart to the Navy's chief clerk.

Farmers' Woes Blamed on U. S.

A spokesman for wheat growers charged yesterday that "the economic collapse of agriculture is due to uneconomic policies of the Federal Government and to drought."

M. W. Thatcher, chairman of the wheat conservation conference, told the Senate Unemployment and Relief Committee that high tariff policies had contributed largely to an "uneconomic balance" which had brought wheat and cotton producers face to face with ruin.

M. L. Wilson, Undersecretary of Agriculture, testified that expansion of Federal assistance was needed to aid the 6,874,000 young people between 15 and 25 on American farms.

PHILO VANCE follows a Strange Clue!

by S. S. Van Dine

1. THE MYSTERY! "Here's a tough detective case for you, Mr. Vance. On a train trip recently I met a stranger who invited me to have a drink with him. The whiskey he poured out was the richest, smoothest rye I've ever tasted. I've been searching for it ever since, but I simply can't remember the name of it. Can you help me find it?"

2. ON THE TRAIL! Working on this taste clue, Philo Vance goes to the bartender of the most popular bar in town, who says, "From your description, I would suspect that the whiskey you're hunting is BLACK HAWK. Any man who knows and enjoys really good rye would remember its fine flavor!"

3. THE CAPTURE! After this tip-off Philo Vance hurries over to question the owner of a local liquor store who testifies: "Good rye is the hardest of all whiskies to make, and BLACK HAWK is made by a distiller who has the equipment and experience to produce the finest rye—Hiram Walker!" So Vance takes away a bottle as evidence.

4. SEARCH ENDED! "This is it—the real rye taste I've been hunting for!" exclaims Philo Vance's delighted client, after just one sip of BLACK HAWK. "What about the reward?"

"Let's share it!" replies Vance, as he picks up his glass!

THE CLUE TO REAL RYE TASTE!

If you know good rye, you know that it's the hardest of all whiskies to make. So the equipment and experience of the distillery that produces it is your best clue to rye whiskey quality. That's the trail that leads you direct to BLACK HAWK—for it's made by Hiram Walker in the world's largest distillery. You don't have to be a detective to know that BLACK HAWK is made right and aged right. Its rich bouquet and its robust, ripe flavor are evidence enough! Try it—at your nearest liquor store or your favorite bar.

Charles P. Taft to Preside Over Two-Day Session in Capital.

Opening the two-day conference on Community Moblization for Human Needs, delegates from more than 150 cities will meet at the White House at 10 a. m. today to hear a message from President Roosevelt.

Charles P. Taft, of Cincinnati, chairman of the national citizens' committee for the conference, will respond to the President's address.

Four Discussions Planned.

Chief topics for discussion during conference sessions at the Mayflower Hotel are an adequate program for public relief and the role for community chests and councils of social agencies in future development of community welfare.

Proposals for public relief and welfare policy, presented by the national citizens' committee at a hearing of the Senate Committee on Unemployment and Relief in January, will be reviewed by Taft at a luncheon meeting at 12:30 p. m. today.

Four round-table discussions of current problems of community chests and councils of social agencies have been scheduled for the afternoon sessions from 3 to 5 p. m.

Dinner to Honor Baker.

Hal. H. Griswold, president of the Welfare Federation of Cleveland, will lead discussion on "Securing Public Support for Charity Patients in Private Hospitals;" Horace F. Baker, president of the Pittsburgh Community Fund, "Employe Solicitation;" Harry S. Sommers, president of the St. Paul Community Chest, "Budgeting for Fields of Service in Which Local Governments Also Operate," and Gilbert J. C. McCurdy, president of the Rochester Community Chest, "Special Gifts Solicitation."

Marking the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Community Chest movement, originated in Cleveland in 1913, tonight's dinner meeting will feature a tribute to the late Newton D. Baker, former honorary president of Community Chests and Councils.

The program includes an address by John Stewart Bryan, president of William and Mary College, on "Newton D. Baker, the Citizen;" a review of "The Years Behind Us," by Allen T. Burns, executive vice president of Community Chests and Councils, and a speech on "The Years Ahead," by Tom K. Smith, chairman of the St. Louis Social Security Commission.

Grand Master Custer will visit Central Lodge, No. 1, tonight. Yesterday a large delegation from Potomac Lodge, No. 38, of Alexandria, paid a visit to Columbia Lodge, No. 10, to witness conference of the second degree upon a number of candidates. Tonight members of Columbia Lodge will journey to Alexandria to repay the visit.

Eureka Chapter.

Eureka Chapter, No. 4, R. A. M., will hold a Lebanon night tonight. High Priest Roy D. Bordeon has invited Worshipful Master Arthur M. Robinson, accompanied by his staff of officers of Lebanon Lodge, No. 7, to attend this evening's meeting. A special program of music and dancing has been prepared by the entertainment committee: James J. Brown, chairman; Raymond E. Rapp; Kenneth Markward; Enoch W. Skartvedt and George Mockabee. A social hour with refreshments will follow the meeting.

Masonic Trestleboard.

Two meetings are listed by Masonic lodges to begin at 7:30 o'clock: St. John's, No. 11, M. M.; Hope, No. 20, social.

American Legion.

The department ball committee will meet in the Willard Hotel at 8 o'clock. Also meeting at the same time are the department legislative committee in the Jefferson Room of the Mayflower Hotel and the Sons of Legion Drum and Bugle Corps in the National Guard Armory.

The work was done by the exhibit division of the department.

Notes.

In carrying the names of Federal employes who are exhibiting in the Collectors Club show at the National Museum, there was unintentional omission of J. S. Petrie, whose panel of Egyptian stamps is creating favorable comment. Mr. Petrie, who is an assistant examiner in the Patent Office, has had an interesting career, serving for many years in the American Mission in Egypt, where he engaged extensively in stamp collecting . . . There has come for some reason into our lap a controversy over who was the first person to use the term o. k. in the Federal Government; some contenders saying it was Woodrow Wilson (and maybe he didn't at all), and some giving the credit (if such it be) to Andrew Jackson . . . The three Civil Service commissioners write in to deny a report that the son of a commissioner is employed at the Bituminous Coal Commission.

"No civil service commissioner has a son, or any other relative, working for the Coal Commission," the statement indicated.

"The horticultural experts of the Agriculture Department are on the dog watch these days, looking for the first signs of spring in the more than 3,000 Japanese cherry trees that help to make the National Capital famous. This year the profusion of pink and white haze along the Tidal Basin has achieved the dignity of space in Washington's most comprehensive guidebook, Smack in the center of 'Washington City and Capital' the 1,149-page guidebook by the Federal Writers Project . . . are the Japanese cherry blossoms." $2,111,091,000 Resource Plan Given Congress

President Submits Report on Water Control by National Committee.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt laid before Congress yesterday a $2,111,091,000 program of water control and development for the next six years.

It included $891,091,000 of Federal projects, for which the Government would pay, and $1,220,000,000 of non-Federal development to be financed largely by the States and their political subdivisions.

The National Resources Committee drafted the proposals, and the President recommended that Congress use them as a basis for future legislation.

Nation as Whole Studied.

The committee, at the request of Mr. Roosevelt, looked at the country as a whole and reported what it considered "desirable" to be done in respect to future flood control, navigation, soil conservation, irrigation, rural water supply, stream pollution abatement, power development, and other special water uses.

The committee proposed Federal outlays of $184,629,000 over the next six years for general flood control; for irrigation, $291,539,000; water power, $3,650,000; rivers and harbors, $180,575,000; rural water supply, $33,495,000; beach erosion control, $14,399,000; recreational waters, $5,158,000; wild life conservation, $8,523,000; hydrologic data, $12,796,000.

Flood Control Proposed.

In addition, it proposed $81,266,000 for a two-year program of flood control on the Ohio and lower Mississippi rivers and $75,061,000 for the Tennessee Valley Authority for two years.

The report said the proposed annual expenditures would approximate the average annual outlays for projects of similar types during the last six years.

Senator John E. Miller (Democrat), Arkansas, commented to reporters that the President's message "calls attention to the necessity for long range development of all natural resources, which is very desirable, but does not call for immediate action on important, feasible and economically practical flood control projects."

Trade Board Chairman Is Given Testimonial

F. George Clendaniel, chairman of the Board of Trade's midwinter dinner held February 5, was given a testimonal dinner by the organization at the Mayflower Hotel Wednesday.

E. F. Colladay, president of the Trade Board, presented Clendaniel with a gold watch in appreciation of his services in heading the board's annual big event. The evening was occupied by entertainment put on under the direction of a committee headed by H. S. Owens. Carl Jarrell, chairman of the membership committee, presided.

THIRD TERM LITMUS TESTS: Some of the Capital's oracles took the President's adventure as a syndicated columnist as proof positive that he wants no third term . . . Because such literature would go across better when the author is still in the White House; at least it has rarely made much money for an ex-President.

An-Hsiu Wang . . . Dad's pal.

When he announced the money would go for a "public purpose," some of them took an oracular flip-flop and second-guessed that he is still his own most likely successor. (I wagered $100 the other night that he won't run in 1940.)

If you chat a moment with lively, twinkling Ambassador Wang of China at a party, he is very likely to spring on you his favorite Chinese saying:

"Japan may win battles, but China wins wars."

He thinks it's a lulu.

His winsome, animated daughter An-Hsiu treats him more like a pal than a father; there's nothing remote or inscrutable about her . . . I've seen her win two arguments with him, if gestures and facial expressions mean anything . . . I'd bet on her in a sorority house brawl.

"—epigram from the Chinese."

Cronies of Vice President Garner say that N. B. C. offered him $1,000 a week for a five-minute broadcast. His retort, by the latest version, was:

"You wouldn't pay Jack Garner $50, and the Vice President works for the Government."

Which belongs in the bric-a-brac what-not alongside Mrs. Farley's legendary quip when someone invited the Farleys to cash in on their literary talents:

"Who do they think we are, the Roosevelts?"

After I had finally found a Bible and re-read the Fifteenth Psalm, the one President Roosevelt urged all newspapers to print on Page 1, I was a little puzzled by the line praising him who taketh not up a "reproach against his neighbor."

If the President hath not taken up a reproach against his wealthy and unregenerate neighbors along the Hudson, then who hath?

* * * *

There's more loose talk about dictators in the Capital, as the debate on the President's reorganization bill waxeth (there goes the biblical influence from the White House) hot . . .

At a ringside table at the Shoreham I overheard an elegant young man in white tie and tails trying to organize a secret society sworn to fight against a dictatorship to the last drop of something—scotch and soda, apparently.

American diplomats in Europe complain that someone is always trying to unload on them mysterious faked documents calculated to get another nation in dutch . . . Emissaries panting with mystery sneak 'em into American embassies like bootleggers, and then leave 'em confidentially overnight so the Yankee diplomat can show 'em to everybody.

Hazen Will Leave Today for Three Weeks in Florida

Commissioner and Mrs. Melvin C. Hazen will leave Washington this morning for a three weeks' stay in Florida.

"This is the first real vacation I've had since taking office," Hazen said yesterday.

It is expected that the city head will be accompanied by several friends. Before bidding good-by to Commissioners George E. Allen and Dan I. Sultan yesterday, Hazen made them promise "not to remove anyone from office before I return." It was all in fun, of course.

Charges of Nepotism Denied by Merit Chiefs

Civil Service Commissioners Harry B. Mitchell, Lucille Foster McMillin and Samuel H. Ordway, jr., yesterday denied printed reports charging that a son of one commissioner held a position with the Bituminous Coal Commission.

The commissioners explained that none of them had a relative employed with the coal commission. They said that "such irresponsible allegations are calculated to undermine public confidence in civil service."

Model Water Conservancy Plan Mapped

Potomac River Agency Recommended by Resources Committee.

$4,000,000 Rock Creek Pollution Reduction Project Urged.

Development of a model water conservancy district and pollution reduction project in the Potomac River basin was recommended yesterday by the National Resources Committee in a report submitted to Congress by President Roosevelt.

A $4,000,000 river pollution reduction project, levees along the Potomac in flood areas, improvement of the Washington Channel and development of new water systems were among the recommendations contained in a six-year construction program.

Most of the projects discussed, however, already have been launched or proposed previously.

The operation of a conservancy district in the Potomac River basin, the committee said, would provide concrete experience in legislative and administrative problems that would prove invaluable in other parts of the United States.

Cites Intrastate Pact.

The committee called attention to the intrastate pact authorized by Congress last year for the Potomac River Valley, involving the District, Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

"The Potomac basin is large enough," the report stated, "and its problems are sufficiently varied to make such a conservancy district practicable, but not so large as to make the cost formidable."

The committee recommended further studies of suggested developments of the Potomac River Valley, including "recreational facilities in the Potomac basin which, for example, can be improved easily and made available to the large and nearby population."

The committee recommended an appropriation of $10,000 to complete studies of drinking water resources of Washington, Arlington County and the Washington Suburban Sanitary District.

Projects Held Worthy.

Among the previously proposed projects cited by the committee as worthy were:

Improvement of the Washington Channel and city waterfront, work on which is due to start this spring.

An initial expenditure of $100,000 to build levees and for grade raising along the river front in the Capital to furnish protection against future floods.

Another initial expenditure of $12,000 to complete the building of retarding structures in Rock Creek Park and the reconstruction of Pierce Mill dam for flood control.

The elimination of pollution in Rock Creek.

Members of the local drainage basin committee which co-operated with the National Resources Committee in drafting the report were Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner; J. B. Gordon, sanitary engineer, and John Nolen, jr., director of planning of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Plaque Is Unveiled To Border Patrol

A plaque honoring the men of the United States Border Patrol killed in duty since 1919 was unveiled yesterday in the Labor Building.

James L. Houghteling, Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, who led the ceremonies, praised the courage of the 31 men whose names are on the plaque, and the record of the patrol in its battle against smuggling of aliens along 6,000 miles of the United States border.

Among those who attended the ceremony were 40 district directors of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Zoning Act Amendment Asked for Apartment

An amendment to the District zoning act to permit erection of a 110-foot apartment house on the southeast corner of Thirteenth street and Massachusetts avenue northwest was proposed yesterday in a bill introduced in the House by Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland. The present limitation is 90 feet.

A Senate sub-committee headed by Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, will hold a hearing Monday morning on a District bill to modernize the entire zoning act.

Coleman Jennings Club To Observe Anniversary

Members of the Coleman Jennings Boys Club at Barney Neighborhood House, 470 N street southwest, will celebrate the second anniversary of their organization at 7:30 o'clock tonight at the House. A letter from Coleman Jennings, Community Chest president for whom the club was named, will be read by Robert Grimm, leader of a similar group at Friendship House.

360 Persons Supported By Self-Help Exchange

Food, clothing and fuel have been provided for 360 needy persons in the last six months, in exchange for scrip representing 36,520 hours of work done by the group, according to a report submitted yesterday to the directors of the Washington Self-Help Exchange, meeting at 2529 Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Debutante Injured as Horse Falls

GLADYS MARSH, 21-year-old debutante, who suffered a fractured pelvis yesterday when her horse tripped at a jump and fell upon her at Fort Myer. She was rehearsing for the Fort Myer pageant, "Hoof Prints." Miss Marsh is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard O. Marsh, 105 Leland street, Chevy Chase, Md. She was taken to Emergency Hospital.

Economic Evil Solution Held 'True Defense'

Youth Movement Hears Plea for Distribution of Potential Wealth.

"The only real defense for American democracy is the solution of the economic problems facing the country," Representative H. Jerry Voorhis (Democrat), of California, last night told 500 young men and women who have arrived in Washington on "Youth's Pilgrimage for Jobs and Education."

Equitable distribution of potential wealth produced by the machine age is a better safeguard for free institutions than the effort "to build more battleships than the dictator nations," Voorhis said.

Collective bargaining for labor, old-age pensions, a vigorous Government housing program and such measures as his own American youth act, were described by the California Representative as "foundations for a new America."

"A New Conception."

Calling for "a new conception of patriotism," the speaker said, "You are here to ask for something—the opportunity to join in building an America based on the fullest use of our human and natural resources."

Congress need have no anxiety for national defense, according to Joseph P. Lash, secretary of the American Student Union, "if it gives American youth a country it will be proud to defend."

Referring to testimony of Carl E. Ross, of the Young Communist League, heard yesterday by the Senate sub-committee on labor and education, Lash declared, "Most of us would not agree with his views on bearing arms, but we do defend his right to express honest opinions openly.

"We don't like red-baiting. That's not the way to meet issues."

Education Criticized.

Prof. Doxie Wilkerson, of Howard University, declared that education of the colored race, as compared to that available to white children, is more inadequate today than in 1900.

"If Negroes are to participate in building this new America we talk about, they must be educated for the task . . . The type of education many Americans are receiving today is ideal preparation for fascism in this country."

Reminding delegates that they are scheduled to canvass their Congressmen today on the "American Youth Act" and other pending legislation, William W. Hinckley, chairman of the American Youth Congress, concluded the meeting in the Howard University chapel with brief "lobbying instructions."

African Trek Is Subject Of Geographic Lecture

Senate Group Wants 3 More Judges in D.C.

2 Added Justices Urged on District Bench, 1 on Appellate.

Three additional Federal judges to expedite litigation in District courts were recommended yesterday by a sub-committee to the Senate Judiciary Committee as part of a national bill recommending a score of new jurists.

Two of the judges would be assigned to the United States District Court and one to the United States Court of Appeals. The Attorney General, in a report based on a judicial conference last year, suggested three more justices for the District Court.

King Is Satisfied.

Senator Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, chairman of the sub-committee, said that the reduction to two makes the bill agreeable to Senator King (Democrat), Utah, who during the hearings, complained that the court sessions are too short and vacations too long.

If the bill is enacted into law, the District will have 11 District Court justices and six on the Appellate bench.

In revising the bill, the sub-committee took from the measure proposals for one additional district judge in each of these districts: Northern Ohio, Kansas, Southern Florida, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania and Tennessee.

Other Posts Added.

The new bill added two additional judges for the Third Judicial Circuit, with the provision that the first two vacancies to occur would not be filled. The circuit embraces New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware.

Left in the bill were proposals for appointment of one adidtional district judge in each of these districts: Eastern Louisiana, western Louisiana, southern Texas, eastern Michigan, western Washington, southern California, northern California, northern Illinois, southern New York and western Virginia. In addition, it proposed one additional judge to serve in both the eastern and western districts of Arkansas.

The revised bill also retains provisions for one additional judge in the following circuits: Second (Vermont, Connecticut and New York) Fifth (Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas and Canal Zone); Sixth (Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky and Tennessee), and Seventh (Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin).

Police Wage War On Fake Drive for Blind Dance Fund

A police investigation of charity racketeers who solicit funds from Washingtonians in the name of the blind was set in motion last night following complaint of Mrs. Grace V. Thompson, president of the District of Columbia Association of Workers for the Blind, that the name of her organization had been used fraudulently in sale of dance tickets.

Mrs. Thompson complained to police after she was told by the Better Business Bureau that the dance tickets were being sold under the name of the association.

Detective Sergt. Charles Warder, attached to the check and fraud squad, said last night there would be a thorough investigation of the alleged racket. He said he would confer today with officials of the Better Business Bureau.

Mrs. Thompson said last night her organization was neither sponsoring a dance nor soliciting funds.

New Inquest Today In Veteran's Death

A second coroner's inquest into the police shooting of Leroy Keys, demented colored World War veteran, will begin at 11:30 a. m. today at the District morgue.

Policeman John W. Nally, of the Tenth Precinct, is accused of firing the shot which killed Keys in a gun and knife battle at 2470 Ontario road northwest early Tuesday. Testimony at an inquest Wednesday was set aside when the coroner's jury failed to agree.

Meanwhile, the National Negro Congress, 717 Florida avenue northwest, sent telegrams to Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald and city prosecutors demanding a "fair and intelligent" hearing.

Congressional War Veterans Swap Helmets For Red Paper Hats at Their Annual Dinner

American Legion Leader Makes Only Speech of Social Affair.

Bedecked in bright red paper hats instead of the traditional trench helmets, which some wore 20 years ago the War Veterans Association of the Seventy-Fifth Congress held their annual dinner last night at the Wardman Park Hotel.

The affair was social, except for a brief address by Daniel J. Doherty, national commander of the American Legion, who was introduced by his Representative, Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers.

"The American Legion wants you to enact such legislation as you see fit, such legislation as will benefit the country," said Mr. Doherty, who served with the Navy in home waters during the war.

"That is all the American Legion wants of Congress."

Many of the veterans were graying and bald, and most of them were stoutish. Their ladies wore white confetti tassels on their hats, in contrast to the white flowers with the blue stars that the veterans wore.

Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, commandant of the Marine Corps, was among guests of honor and drew the "lucky" number which won him a toy automobile as a souvenir.

Other guests of honor included Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, the Veterans' Administrator; Dr. Overton Mennett, national commander of the Grand Army of the Republic; John Milton Claypool, commander in chief of the United Confederate Veterans; Thomas D. Binckley, past department commander of the American Legion; Scott P. Squyres, commander in chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Maple T. Harl, national commander of the Disabled American Veterans.

Gasoline Price Inquiry Sought By Citizen Unit

The organization authorized its officers to contact the Federal Trade Commission, the Southeast Council of Citizens, and the federation, in a drive toward lower prices. Members charged that while 85 per cent profits were charged private consumers, the Federal Government was able to purchase gasoline for 7½ cents a gallon.

A plea for efficient methods in the projected District automobile inspection program was prepared for submission to the Commissioners and the Director of Traffic. They protested the passage of a tax on fuel oil. (The measure was voted down in Congress yesterday).

The association voted to send two delegates to the playground council.

Stop Signs Urged

The American University Park Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution asking that the A. B. C. Board notify all interested persons and organizations about its activities in granting and canceling licenses.

The association also urged the Traffic Director to install stop signs on Forty-sixth and Forty-ninth streets, from Massachusetts avenue to Western avenue.

Other resolutions were adopted urging passage of the bill designed to clamp down on numbers runners, opposing a bill that would boost the Federal tax on fuel oil, and approving the District Bar Association's proposal that four court rooms in the new Police Court Building, not yet designated for any other purpose, be used for the District Supreme Court.

First Baptist Church Marks 136th Year With a Banquet

House-Warming Held in Luther Rice Memorial Education Building; Rep. Bruce Barton Praises Nation's Faith in God.

The congregation of the First Baptist Church celebrated the church's 136th anniversary last night with a banquet and a house-warming of the recently completed Luther Rice Memorial Education Building.

Representative Bruce Barton (Republican), of New York, told the diners that "this country has always come through its calamities and its depressions because of the patience of God and our faith in Him."

"There is no easy solution to our economic and social problems," Barton declared. "Democracy is the hard way of government but only the hard way is worth while."

Lauding the work of the local Baptists, Dr. W. L. Darby, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, said that "there are 140 Protestant churches here with a membership of over 18,000, and not one of them can stand alone. We must join forces if we are to carry on this great Christian work," he asserted.

Other speakers were Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the District Convention of Baptist Churches; E. Hilton Jackson, chairman of the board of trustees; Jordan R. Bentley, Sunday school superintendent; E. B. Shaver, moderator of the District convention; Mrs. George A. Ross, president of the Baptist Women's Missionary Society; Howard Reese, president of the Baptist Student Union of Washington, and the Rev. W. W. Royal. Presiding was Elgin Smith, moderator.

The First Baptist service was held here March 7, 1802, in the old Treasury Building. At that time the Rev. Jeremiah Moore, grandfather of R. Walton Moore, present counsellor of the State Department, preached a sermon to a group of five Baptists.

Furuseth's Ashes To Rest on Waves In Mid-Atlantic

President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, yesterday delegated Paul Scharrenberg, lifelong friend and co-worker of the late Andrew Furuseth, of the International Seamen's Union, to take the latter's ashes from this city to Savannah, Ga., for shipment on the steamship Schoharie, of the South Atlantic Steamship Line.

The Schoharie will sail for European ports today Furuseth's birthday, and in compliance with his wishes, the ashes will be scattered over the ocean when the ship is half way across the Atlantic. Ceremonies will be held in Savannah when the ashes are delivered to the American Federation of Labor crew on the Schoharie and final rites will take place in mid-Atlantic, with Capt. Thomas Webb, of the Schoharie, as the master of ceremonies.

Modified Law Urged to Aid Heart Cripple

Dr. Esler Says Patients in Many Cases Are Still Able to Work.

Enforced Compensation Closes Door to Jobs, He Points Out.

Modification of compensation laws in the District and elsewhere to provide more opportunity for gainful employment in industry to the "cardiac cripple" was urged last night by Dr. James Esler, professor of clinical cardiology at Georgetown University School of Medicine.

Dr. Esler gave the closing lecture in the weekly public health forums conducted by the university.

He said it was not a criticism of employers to say that many large industrial firms refuse to hire manual workers when physical examinations disclose symptoms of heart disease. The same restrictions, he said, are imposed by the Civil Service Commission.

He said, in reply to a question, that an employee under the District compensation law cannot legally waive his right to compensation, thus barring a possible solution to the employment problem.

The great majority of the cardiac group who are only mildly affected and are able to work lose no more time in industry than other workers, he contended. They can go on this way for 10 or 15 years, he said, before their affliction makes them totally unfit for employment.

Dr. Esler said the problem appears to be to individual rather than general, due to the great variety of work suitable for the cardiac patient. Between 50 and 60 per cent of the employes in most large industrial concerns, he said, have cardiac troubles of a minor nature.

During the panel discussion it was suggested that the District should have a separate institution where cardiac patients might be sent for treatment.

2d Miss Hale Dies; Amassed Fortune While Living on Relief

Miss Roberta Hale, 90, who with her sister Olivia amassed over $10,000 in more than 30 years during which the two lived on charity, died yesterday at the Sacred Heart Home. Miss Olivia died February 21.

The spinster pair were never seperated in a life that perplexed and frightened them. They were found last December in their rooms at 512 Second street northwest, both injured, both half-starved. Four relief investigators found $10,000 hidden about the rooms during a 12-hour search.

The two, daughters of Patrick Henry Hale, who served in the Confederate Army, were brought up in the belief that "no lady should work." For three decades, while they lived in a series of shabby rooms, they received charity from at least a dozen organizations and individuals.

The pair was taken to Gallinger Hospital, where Miss Olivai died from complications caused by a fractured hip. After she had recovered from burns, Miss Robeta was sent to the Sacred Heart Home.

Funeral services will be held at Chambers' undertaking establishment, 517 Eleventh street southeast, at 3 p. m. tomorrow. Burial will be at Seat Pleasant, Md.

Colorful and Delicious Irish Dinners For St. Patrick's Day Easy to Make

These cookies are designed for the lucky Irish and the many friends of Erin who will be honoring the birthday of the genial St. Patrick Thursday. The horseshoes are cocoanut macaroons and the shamrocks iced cookies decorated with sliced green gum drops.

Menus, Favors Should Follow Motif of Green

By Jean Green.

THURSDAY is a grand time to have a party and be Irish merry even though there is not a drop of Irish blood in your veins. Shamrocks, shillelagh, clay pipes, wishing wells, plug hats and imitation blarney stones have appeared in most windows up and down the avenues, so it should not be difficult to obtain the atmosphere for a rollicking good party.

Not only the menus and the favors but costumes should follow the rule of green to gain the luck of the Emerald Isle. For the table, there are green lace paper doilies in the shape of shamrocks, green checked paper plates and party picks with green frills attached for spearing the toothsome hors d'oeuvres.

JEAN GREEN.

Favors can be found as green bags of white mints with inked in features. There also are harps sprinkled with gold shamrocks for nuts and Jack Horner centerpieces in green, filled with appropriate favors.

Refreshments for the party either can be elaborate or simple. The cookies pictured are simple to prepare. They are shaped as horseshoe macaroons and shamrocks and can be made in 15 minutes by tested kitchen time. They are good with pistachio ice cream and punch or hot coffee.

For the tea or the afternoon party, assorted sandwiches, small cakes, iced with green; salted nuts and green and white mints are sufficient. Watercress rolls are ideal on the sandwich tray. Make them by spreading thin slices of bread with a creamy butter mixture, covering with chopped watercress and rolling. For the party, they can be tied with green to have a more festive air.

Good Luck Cookies.

1 1-3 cups sweetened condensed milk
½ cup peanut butter.
1 cup nut meats, chopped.

Blend the sweetened condensed milk with the peanut butter and nut meats. Drop by spoonfuls on a buttered baking sheet. Bake in a moderate oven for 15 moinutes. Remove from the pan and frost. Decorate with shamrocks cut from green gumdrop.

CONTEST WINNERS

PANCAKES AU GRATIN

½ lb. American cheese (grated)
1 cup hot creamed chicken
1¼ cups milk
1 egg beaten
1¼ pancake flour mix
2 tablespoons melted butter

Add half of the cheese to the creamed chicken. Mix milk, egg, flour, and butter. Make pancakes about 5 incese across. While hot, roll each one like a jelly roll, with hot creamed chicken in center. Sprinkle pancakes with remaining grated cheese. Place in a moderate over, 350 degrees, long enough to melt cheese. Place on platter. Garnish with sections of apple cooked in red cinnamon syrup.

For those bridge parties or last minute company, have some of these delicious cheese cookies always on hand. Mrs. Edith K. Levine, 2121 New York avenue northwest, was awarded second prize for this recipe.

DELICIOUS CHEESE COOKIES

¼ lb. cream cheese
¼ lb. butter
1 egg
Pinch salt
½ lb. flour
1 teaspoon vanilla

Make a dough combining all the ingredients, using only the yolk of the egg, saving the white. Knead the dough toroughly, about 10 minutes, then place overnight in the icebox. Care must be used to see that the dough is well kneaded. In the morning, warm the dough by placing it in a warm spot and then roll out to about ½ inch thick. Then beat the white of the egg stiff and place in one dish, and in another dish, put some sugar. Use a cookie cutter and after the cookie is cut, dip first in the beaten white and then in the sugar. Place on a greased cookie sheet and bake about 20 minutes in an over about 350 degrees. This will make about 38 or 40 cookies.

Looking for something different in soups? For this unusual recipe, Mrs. Margaret C. Hancock, La Plata, Md., was awarded third prize. You'll like that tangy cheese taste.

CHEESE SOUP.

2tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
1 1-3 cups condensed consomme
¼ teaspoon worcestershire sauce
¼teaspoon salt
Few grains pepper
½ cup grated cheese.
Paprika

Melt butter, add flour and mix until smooth. Gradually add milk while stirring constantly and cook until thick and smooth. Add condensed consomme, worcestershire sauce, salt and pepper; heat with crantons and sprinkle with paprika. Makes four servings.

As fresh asparagus will soon be in season, here is a very simple, but very tasty dish for any meal. This recipe comes from Mrs. Ira Lee Law, 321 Hamlin street northeast.

ASPARAGUS ON TOAST WITH CHEESE SAUCE.

1 can of green asparagus tips

A few drops of Worcestershire sauce (optional)
Dash of paprika
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter (or lard)
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
Dash of pepper

Melt butter in saucepan; add flour, salt and pepper, and blend well. Add milk gradually, stirring constantly, and continue stirring and cooking until thickened. Add the cheese and a few drops of Worcestershire sauce and stir until smooth. Place the asparagus on toast, pour a little cheese sauce over it and then put a dash of paprika on it. Tomatoes may be served with this dish and it looks as good as it tastes.

This salad is an ideal lunch dish for any member of the family. This recipe was sent in by Miss Rosa Manns, Seat Pleasant, Md., and wins fifth place in the contest.

READERS' FOOD FORUM

Should mothers plan an after-school lunch for their children? If so, what type of lunch should be selected? These are the questions selected this week to register the opinion of four Washington mothers on this rather controversial subject.

MRS. LESTER BOYKIN, 2825 Albemarle street, Chevy Chase, Md.: "I do not plan a special menu for the children but there are always certain foods on hand that they can use for their lunch if they choose. I do not find that it spoils their appetites for dinner. I let them have whatever they want but try to influence them to choose milk and fruit. There is always some type of canned fruit in the dish in the refrigerator and some type of cheese. My son of 15 is very fond of crackers and date and nut bread. The only qualification I made is that the lunch must come just after they come home from school. It must never be less than an hour before dinner.

• • • •

MRS. ROY WHITESEL, 3714 Thirteenth street northwest: "The after-school lunches in our home are on the serve yourself plan. Fruit, cookies and milk are always available but I let them get it themselves. It is a good plan not only for physical reasons but for the psychological. I like to have my children come right home from school. If they know I am expecting them and have some special lunch for them they do not stop to play."

• • • •

MRS. CHARLES PETERS, 3557 Holmead place northwest: "We have an early dinner in our home, so usually my son who is 7 waits until mealtime. Milk is served as a mid-morning lunch at his school for those who ask for it. Many times when he comes home from school he will ask for milk or crackers and I always get them for him. I feel that this extra nourishment is an excellent idea."

• • • •

MRS. JOSE COLOM, the Dupont Circle Apartment: My son of 11 likes to have milk shake or a sandwich when he comes home from school. In the Latin-American countries, we are accustomed to three large meals during the day. My son is accustomed to this, too. He is very active. If he does not have some nourishment after school he becomes weak. I think that his appetite is better when he has the lunch than when he does not.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

The Big Ten.

MRS. A.—She has never been known on receiving an invitation to declare she had "nothing to wear." Year in and year out she dons her one black crepe with the rhinestone clip and wears it with verve and aplomb.

• • • •

MISS B.—On a salary of around $1,200 a year, she manages to have the latest blouses, sweaters, beads, cute little hats, etc., at least one-half hour ahead of anyone else in her office, and at the same time to help support an aged grandfather and a worthless brother-in-law.

• • • •

MRS. C.—Despite four small children, life insurance payments, rent, dental bills, etc., she meets the social situation bravely, and can on a moment's notice rig herself out for any event—morning musicale, tennis match, hen party, school play, tea, all night suburban party.

• • • •

MRS. D.—She has a girdle she doesn't have to pull down at the sides. She never wears her "darling little knit" without it. She can even wear a Dirndl dress without someone's paging Walter Winchell.

• • • •

MISS E.—She never wears the wrong hat. To date she has successfully resisted the urge to don a witch's crown, a stove pipe, a dunce cap or one of the new window boxes. In shopping for a hat she never gives up and says, "Oh, what's the use? I'll have to look like a freak anyway."

• • • •

MISS G.—Through long research she has evolved a "seven veils" dress—one that by a few additions or subtractions can be worn to the office in the morning, on to tea or cocktails in late afternoon, then to dinner, later to the theater, a White House reception or a State society dance.

• • • •

MRS. F.—She has never let a sales person talk her into buying anything she didn't want. She has courage to walk out of a fitting booth after she has tried on 17 dresses if she does not find the one that suits her. She will even leave a shoe salesman in her stocking feet before she will compromise and take the pair of $12.50 pumps she is not quite sure about.

• • • •

MISS E.—She never, never wears any old thing thinking it will be a quiet day, that she won't see anybody and that she will dress up tomorrow. She is always prepared to meet visitors from her home town, old school mates, old beaux, old beaux wives, the boss' wife, all her women enemies and even the interesting widower she discovered at her last cocktail party.

• • • •

MRS. G.—She has a subtle sixth sense that enables her to know just what to wear to the vaguest form of social event and is never caught with the wrong dress at the right party and vice versa.

• • • •

MRS. H.—She is the one in a million who has met the short-skirt situation with grace and restraint. She does not sit up blandly exposing her knees and casting dirty looks at men who stare, neither does she keep tugging at her skirts nor keep getting up and sitting down again to get "settled."

• • • •

MRS. I.—She has murdered to date a total of 12 saleswomen who have insisted on telling her what "THEY" are wearing.

Greek Women Seek Beauty as Athenians Did

With No Careers Open, Girls Spend Much of Their Days Primping.

By Genevieve Reynolds.

DESPITE poverty and hardships the modern Greek woman seeks beauty as diligently as did the Athenian beauties of Ancient Greece when the name itself was synonymous with grace and beauty, reports Miss Eugenia Pope, who has just returned from a six-month sojourn in Athens where she helped to organize the first hospital for crippled children in that country.

Beauty consciousness among the Greeks is by no means new. They knew the artifices of make-up long before America was discovered. "The modern American girl," says Miss Pope, "considers herself well groomed if she goes to the beauty parlor once a week but the modern Grecian debutante has her hair coiffured each day.

Daily Beauty Program.

"In fact, the Grecian girl sets aside a considerable part of each day to beautify herself. This can best be understood if you consider her daily routine which consists of the following:

Breakfast at 8:30 or 9 a. m.
A visit to the beauty shop from 9:30 to 10:30 or 11 a. m.
Shopping from 11 to 1 p. m.
Lunch, 1 p. m.
Siesta, 2 to 4:30 p. m.
Golf, tennis or dancing, 4:30 to 7 p. m.

At 7 she returns to her home to dress for dinner or remain at the club to dance or play bridge.

Dinner at 9:30 p. m.

She then attends a night club, concert or dance until the wee hours of the morning.

At the beauty parlor a Grecian girl has her hair individually styled to suit her features. She likes many curls but does not ape her friends. Once a week the hair is shampooed and it is reconditioned every ten days by a hot olive oil treatment, explained Miss Pope.

Toenails Match Fingers.

A pedicure and manicure are next in her beauty regime. In this she shows a distinct liking for bright, red polishes. Fingernails and toenails are painted the same color. For daytime she wears open-toed sandals that reveal the carefully painted toenails. No hose are worn except for evening. None of the Grecian women have corns or misshapen feet. This Miss Pope attributes to their selection of comfortable shoes. All the sandals are handmade to fit the shape of the foot.

Shopping time is spent with the dressmaker who designs each dress for a particular person. All dresses are designed and made by seamstresses who follow the classic simplicity of the ancient. There are no shops in Greece that sell ready-made clothes.

Perfection of form and bodily grace are sought through dancing and exercises. Exercises take the form of sports such as tennis, golf and running games. Esthetic dancing is part of every girl's daily routine.

No Careers Open.

Complete relaxation and sleep at their siestas keep them keenly alert and fresh looking instead of tired and haggard like the average American debutante who tries to crowd each minute of the day with dashing hither and yon.

"Do the Grecian girls talk about beauty," Miss Pope was asked.

"Yes," she replied. "It is their chief concern in life, for they are not encouraged in educational pursuits or careers. Marriage is their only career."

"Marriages still are arranged by the families," explained Miss Pope. "Since no Grecian man weds until all his sisters are married he is usually around 40 years of age before he can think of a bride for himself. It is necessary for him to provide an adequate dowry for each of his sisters before he can arrange a marriage for them. When he does marry it is usually to a girl around 20 years of age."

Miss Pope first went to Greece as secretary to the American Delegation of the International Institute of Statistics. After the conference she went to Germany as a foreign correspondent. Then she was recalled to Athens by the Near East Foundation to conduct a survey of crippled children, 16 years or less of age.

"While the Grecian's ideal of beauty is admirable it is unfortunate that it has not been more cognizant of the factors of disease that cause so many crippled children and thus mar their chance of attaining the ideal of beauty in perfection of form," she says. "However, I believe that they will assume the responsibility of those less fortunate and extend this search of beauty to all the native Greeks, regardless of position."

What the Modern Maid of Athens Wears

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, March 10.

WITH LITTLE more halloo than that aroused by a suburban cookie-baking contest, play has been going on here for the Eastern bridge championship. This epic event is taking place in the wide-open ballroom of the Park Central Hotel. No armed sentries push back the crowding enthusiasts—I didn't even hear one man, complete with satin badge, sound off an oldtime "Shush!"

ALICE HUGHES

And I am trying to figure out what has happened in the last few years.

I am certain that just as many people are battling it out at contract, and that the neighborhood carnage is just as terrible. But its public manifestations here have lost all the showmanship and excitement that once made a top flight bridge orgy here a combination of a Rose Bowl football game and an hour of prayerful meditation. For they were the days of "systems," and great bridge showmen, and red-hot publicity campaigns, and those of us who lived through the stirring times will never forget them—especially the terrifice Lenz-Culbertson battles fought out at the Waldorf. That, friends, was a contest!

Well removed from the scene of action, we of the press were permitted to smoke, drink tonics on the cuff, and even practice our own systems with free cards. At times, like reverent visitors to a shrine, we were permitted to tiptoe to the front—on ankle-deep rugs which thundered to the crash of dropped cigarettes. Twenty men with badges hissed "Psssst!" And through a tiny peephole we saw Ely and Jo Culbertson and Sidney Lenz and partner at that titanic battle of wits and systems. We left as one blessed, or cursed, with visions!

Now our Eastern tourney drones away in an open ballroom. It is very dull and depressing indeed. Won't some lady please shout "Shush"?

Mrs. Dean Smith Schloss, of Hunter College, tells me that no less than 1,141 young ladies of that enormous municipal knowledge factory worked during the fall semester, earning over $50,000! It would seem to show that the Hunter girls not only earn while they learn, but are preparing to step out from under their mortar-boards as fully armed career women come graduation day.

Margaret Case, a Vogue editor, said interesting things at a recent fashion group forum, developing her thesis that the modern woman's home and clothes keep neck and neck in variety and interest. "The four big influences in both," said Margaret, "are the pursuit of the sun, a knowledge of fine arts, world news events, and travel." True, how true—and please add the state of the checkbook.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Man Meets Again, and Still Loves, Woman Who Jilted Him 20 Years Ago; She's a Widow; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Twenty-six years ago I came to the city a green country boy, 16 years old. I got a job the first day, went to live with my employer and there met a girl 15 years old (from another city) going to school here. We liked each other from the start, had many tastes in common and all my spare time was spent with her. After three years she was going home. We became engaged and were to be married on my twenty-first birthday. I was making $100 a month, all clear, with the promise of a share in the business when I was 21.

• • • •

We corresponded regularly after she left. I made one visit to see her and to meet her family, was cordially received and thought I had made a good impression. We planned everything, even the house and the neighborhood in which she wanted to live. This was six months before my twenty-first birthday. Three months later she wrote that our marriage could never be; but hoped we would always be friends. I was so dumfounded I never answered her letter. She wrote two others, with no explanation. They, too, went into the wastebasket, unanswered. Two months later she married another man. In two years she was a widow, with a baby daughter.

• • • •

Now here is the great problem: She is in this city with a permanent job. I have met her twice, very unexpectedly. The second time, she got me aside, asked me to call on her, said she had so much to talk about and wanted an answer then, which I could not give. I told her I would have to take it under advisement. My mind is so confused I cannot think clearly. I had thought, years ago, that by going with other girls I could forget her. It was impossible. No other woman has ever had any charms for me. I love her as dearly today as ever I did. She is the first and only woman for me. What shall I do? DUMB.

• • • •

The Thing to Do.

DEAR DUMB: Inasmuch as you love the lady today as dearly as ever you did, it would appear that the only manly and courageous thing to do is to start courting her all over again. By all means accept her invitation to call and talk over old times. Don't wear your heart on your sleeve when you go; be friendly and a trifle noncommittal in your attitude; let her do most of the talking; and don't tell her, until you know which way the land lies, so to speak, that you have never ceased loving her. It is my guess that she is eager to pick up the threads of that old relationship where it was broken off years ago, with the intention of provoking and promptly accepting a second offer of marriage. If she has been a widow for twenty years, it is probable that she, like you, has always cherished the memory of that boy-and-girl romance, and always hoped (as you have not dared to let yourself hope) that fate might bring you together again one day.

• • • •

On the other hand, of course, it could be that she had more or less forgotten you; but, on meeting you again and intuitively sensing your loneliness and inarticulate love of her, was inspired, out of sheer kindliness, to melt the ice that obviously had been frozen around your heart these twenty years. Perhaps she only wishes to explain how and why she came to disappoint and hurt you in just the way she did. She may have explanations to make which will entirely restore your faith in her integrity; or, at least, in the sincerity of her intentions throughout. After all, you know, if she decided, girl-fashion, that she cared more for another man, she did the fair thing in breaking off your marriage plans even at the eleventh hour.

• • • •

For the middle-aged person, there are no friends so consoling as old friends—friends of one's youth—and the sentiment of deathless love is so rare an emotion that it should never be denied expression. What matter that you did not marry her? that you may, perhaps, never marry her? Isn't it enough that you can have her again as a part of your daily life, in the role of friend and sometime social companion, since she exerts, for you, a charm that no other woman ever has or, apparently, ever can? I realize that much of your confusion of mind and hesitancy are due to the fact that you don't wish to be hurt again as you were once hurt. But it is a mistake to let your actions be governed by fear.

M. H.

Pineapple Recipes To Be Given Prizes

Pineapple season opens right on time this year. Puerto Rico sends most of this fruit during March and April and Cuba during May and June. All sorts of interesting spring dishes can be made with the pineapple. The fresh fruit is ideal for fresh fruit cups and for marmalades. If used for cool gelatin desserts, there is a secret that must be followed before preparation if the dessert is to be firm and thick. The pineapple must first be heated to destroy a certain enzyme that is present in the fruit. This same secret should be followed in making tangy pineapple ice and sherbets.

The Post this week offers five cash prizes for recipes made either with fresh or canned pineapple. The first prize is $3, the second $2, and there are three prizes of $1 each.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Rising Hems Make It Necessary to Improve Unshapely Legs.

By Ida Jean Kain.

WE WONDER if Schiaparelli, Irene and Suzy all have perfect legs, or if the masculine influence in fashion is not responsible for the new high in skirts, which has been officially set at 15 inches from the floor.

It is very doubtful whether more than 10 per cent of the feminine population is honestly enthusiastic over this exhibit of legs to a coldly critical world. The average pair of legs is far from perfect and could disappear to advantage behind a woman's skirts. Since we cannot count on the fashion designers for this protection, however, it is up to us to look into the reasons legs are so seldom what they should be.

Unlovely legs run to extremes in form and may be too thin or too fat. Aside from the weight problem, the trouble with each of these types is in underdeveloped musculature, which causes the thin legs to appear spindly and the large legs to look flabby and formless.

May Not Match Figure.

Moreover, legs do not always match the figure. Some heavy people have massive legs, others have legs that seem dangerously thin, and the legs of slim girls run from lovely to broomsticks. It's all in the musculature.

Fortunately, leg contours are as amenable to change as skirt lengths. The process takes longer, but through weight control, exercise and outdoor sports, you can have beautiful legs.

Perhaps your legs are perfect. You can check against the following: The average American girl of 5 feet 4 inches has a perfect calf measurement at 12½ to 13 inches, ankle 7 to 8 inches. The calf measurement may vary from 11¼ inches for 5 feet of height, medium build, to 14 inches for the girl of 5 feet 8 inches. Underexercised legs are unlikely to conform to these measurements.

The outdoor girls and the chorines usually have firm, lovely contours—legs 'n' all. Dancing, skating, skiing, climbing, bicycling and swimming make for perfect legs. The average woman, however, does none of these things. We spend too much time indoors and legs show it. Corrective exercise is invaluable for recontouring. To slenderize thick calves, leg stretching exercises are performed with the heels pointed, and developing exercises are taken on tiptoe.

Muscular underdevelopment of the calf extends into the thigh and shows up in bulges or hollows, so that leg exercises should include the thigh. The following exercise belongs to this general type and builds up and develops the muscles as it wears down fatty tissues:

MOVEMENT: Quickly reverse the positions of the feet, bringing the right foot forward with heel on floor, left foot back with weight on toes and ball of foot.

The outdoor girl usually has fine legs.

Jules Henry, Armours, Mme. Simopoulos Feted

Quartet Holds Capital's Social Spotlight; Envoy William C. Bullitt Leaves for 'Quiet Vacation in Florida.'

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Jules Henry, Mme. Simopoulos and the Norman Armours continued to hold Washington's social spotlight yesterday. United States Ambassador to France, William C. Bullitt, whose arrival early in the week seemed likely to capture the biggest spotlight of all, left yesterday afternoon for Florida for "a quiet vacation." He was accompanied by his daughter, Anne, who is vacationing from her studies at the Foxcroft School.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Whither he was headed, Ambassador Bullitt would not say.

"I'm not telling anybody exactly where I'm going," he declared shortly before his departure. "I'm planning to visit friends; I want a quiet vacation and plenty of time to rest."

He will return April 5.

Meanwhile, the newly appointed Ambassador to Chile and Mrs. Armour were feted at a luncheon given by the Chilean Ambassador, Manuel Trucco. Later, they dropped in for tea with Mrs. Cordell Hull, and last night they dined with a friend.

Among the Chilean Ambassador's other luncheon guests were the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles; the Bolivian Minister and Senora de Guachalla; the Minister of Panama and Senora de Boyd; the former United States Ambassador to Chile and Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Hector Diaz Leguizamon, of the Argentine Embassy; Count and Countess Roberti, of the Italian Embassy; the First Secretary of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Huneeus; Gerard Walravens, of the Belgian Embassy, and Mme. Walravens, and Dr. L. S. Rowe, director of the Pan-American Union.

The group in Mrs. Hull's apartment at tea time was a particularly congenial one. In addition to the Armours, the new French Ambassador, Rene Doynel de Saint Quentin, was there; also, the Canadian Minister and Lady Marler, the former Lieutenant Governor of Canada and Mrs. Herbert A. Bruce, and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

According to present plans, Mr. and Mrs. Armour will leave Washington either tomorrow or the next day, and will sail for Chile next Saturday.

Jules Henry Honored at Lucet Luncheon

Other guests were the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Marc Peter, the Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. Victor Mallet, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Feis, and Mrs. Harold B. Hinton. M. Henry will be honored again this evening . . . at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. George A. Garrett.

The much be-feted Mme. Simopoulos, wife of the Greek Minister to London, was a honor guest at two events yesterday—the small cocktail party given by Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Essary at the 1925 F Street Club, and the dinner at which the Honorary Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. H. H. Sims entertained.

Guests at the cocktail party were old friends of Mme. Simopoulos, who knew her when her husband was envoy in Washington. In the group were Princess Hohenlohe-Schillingsfurst, of New York; Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin, Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, the Austrian Minister, Edgar Prochnik; the Geek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos, Mrs. Merriam Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Glover, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, the Norwegian Minister and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, Mme. Van Kaathoven and Mrs. Wallach Merriam.

Mme. Simopoulos will leave Monday for New York.

Junior Leaguer Elected to Service Board

Mrs. John Beale Bloomer, of the Junior League, has been elected a director of the Travelers Aid Society. Her name went on the distinguished roster, which is headed by Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, a few days ago. Members of her committee who have been available for Travelers Aid activity this year include Miss Gertrude Pearson, Miss Mary Jane Pelley, Miss Leonie McCoy, Mrs. H. S. Hurlbut, Miss Sarah Louise Snell and Miss Virginia Cook. In countless instances, these members have given valuable help to the Society—aiding ill and lost transients; investigating case problems in order to answer inquiries from out of town regarding run-aways; and helping to dispatch routine work at the desk in Union Station and in the main office of the society.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

RICHARD SANGER can always be counted upon to do the unusual. Several years ago he went to Russia as a Communist sympathizer and came back a Republican—so ardent a one that he now works for the Republican national committee.

At the present time he and Mrs. Sanger are putting the finishing touches on the only modernist house for miles around out Westmoreland Hills way. Mr. Sanger, who is a Republican with a sense of humor, has christened the place "Ringside," short for "ringside seat at the greatest show on earth." The house, a marvelous construction of glass bricks, many windows and 17 rooms, was built after the owners held a competition among six leading architects to decide on a design.

DUDLEY HARMON

• • • •

LAST EVENING they entertained members of the Republican Committee on program from the District of Columbia and Maryland. The guests included that dyed-in-the-wool rooter for the G. O. P., Mrs. Merriam Curtis; Dr. Arthur Christie, Clyde Garrett, Mary Obenauer, Mrs. Cooper Rhodes, and, from Maryland, Dr. Walter Baetger, famous surgeon; Robert Bonnell and Wallace Williams. Alexander Smith, of New Jersey, chief of the eastern division of the committee on program, also was present.

This was the first dinner held at Ringside since the Sangers moved in.

THE ROBERT BRENNANS, of the Irish Legation, have been catapulted into some unaccustomed limelight with the report that Brennan will succeed Michael MacWhite as Minister.

Since they lead a quiet home life, this interesting family are not as well known in Washington as they deserve. Mr. Brennan is a playwright and former newspaperman, and took an important part in the Irish Revolution. He and Mrs. Brennan have three girls and a son. The girls are named for Irish queens—Emer, Maeve and Deidre. One attends American University, another goes to high school, and the eldest stays home. Young Robert goes to grade school.

Mrs. Brennan is a wizard at what is now a somewhat neglected art—needlework.

NO PARTY in the Russia of the Czars would have been complete without the presence of at least half a dozen assorted ballerinas. Members of the ballet russe of today always are feted royally in New York, and tonight will be guests of honor at a huge fare-you-well party to be given by members of the Russian colony.

For some reason, Washington fell down this year on entertaining the troupe, which appeared here Tuesday and Wednesday. However, we had the pleasure of meeting Efrem Kurz, the conductor, at a dinner before the final performance. Later he took us and a number of others backstage, but instead of meeting a lot of Degas-girls, doing exercises at a handbar, as we had expected, we were merely shoved around by busy men placing huge sofas and other accoutrement onto the stage. Members of the ballet, even the men, are much smaller than they appear on the stage—in fact, they are actually petite. We were intrigued by one ballerina who passed us in the corridor and who was made up with black lipstick.

Conductor Kurz started life as a Russian, then became a German, and now has taken out his first papers as an American citizen. He formerly was guest conductor of the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra and conducted for Pavlova and Isadora Duncan. He leaves soon to play in Paris and at the music festival in Florence, Italy.

Piano Soloist To Give Recital

Society will attend the concert to be given Tuesday evening at Central High School under the direction of Dr. Kurt Hetzel, with Miss Betty Vandenberg as soloist. The daughter of Senator Arthur Vandenberg is a distinguished amateur pianist.

Among those planning to attend are the Minister of Finland and Mme. Jarnefelt; Representative and Mrs. Robert Low Bacon; Representative and Mrs. Albert Carter; the Delegate from Hawaii and Mrs. Samuel King, Senator and Mrs. Frederick Van Nuys, the Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. H. H. Sims, and Mrs. George Thorpe.

Miss Vandenberg has been studying under Dr. Hetzel all winter, and her appearance with the Civic Orchestra will be her first since her performance last year with Frank Black and the N. B. C. Orchestra.

A number of dinners are scheduled in the next few days, at which members of the diplomatic corps will be hosts.

Woman Relates Perils Of Immigration Aide

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Miss Mary H. Ward, one of the Government's three women commissioners of immigration, last night addressed the Woman's National Democratic Club, discussing the functions of the immigration service and telling something of her experiences as a woman in that field.

"When I was sworn in," said Miss Ward, "I could see that all the men were thinking in the terms of our State oath, 'God save the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, look what we have for a commissioner of immigration.'"

She said she had learned through being the only girl in a family of six children, that the way to get along with men was to ask them to do what you wanted done instead of telling them, and she found it worked as well with those in a Government department as with five brothers.

"We are all working out a pattern in Government service," she said. "I came in as a new weaver and I asked those who were the old and experienced weavers to pick up the threads that I might miss so as not to spoil the pattern."

Lauds Character Of Immigration Workers

Miss Ward paid high tribute to the loyalty, honesty and sturdy character of the men and women in the service and described some of the problems with which they are confronted in dealing with aliens. In her district, with headquarters at Boston, there is a personnel of 200. The arm of the law reaches far, she said, and criminal aliens who may have entered the country unlawfully at Boston and may be congratulating themselves on the fact they have not been apprehended there, will arrive in some other section of the country to find an officer waiting to take them into custody.

She related an amusing case of a stowaway who landed in Boston only last week. When the ship docked he appeared from behind some kegs, naked, black as coal and unable to make anyone understand his lingo. One of the inspectors provided him with clothes, and he regarded the shoes as a curiosity, taking them off and putting them on again with evident delight.

An effort was made at different colleges and universities to find someone who could identify his language and the immigration officials took him to a telephone to talk to one of the professors. When he heard a voice coming from the instrument, he fled back to the other end of the room. Finally a professor of anthropology was able to talk to him and determine that he came from Dakar—and he was sent back when the boat sailed on its return trip.

Dramatic Incidents Occur Every Day

Immigration may seem an abstract and uninteresting subject to the average citizen, but it presents a human drama every day, said Miss Ward, and some of the scenes are sad. There are times when the immigration official finds the law unfair to the individual in a particular case but, despite this, he is obliged to enforce it.

"I have watched immigration men endeavoring to carry out their questioning surrounded completely by crying relatives of some individual whose papers are not quite regular, threatened by political interferers who do not know one quarter as much about the case as the immigration man himself, wheedled by wealthy friends who stoop to bribe, trusting the immigration man will be tempted successfully—and through all of this I find the same steadfast courteous individuals weathering the storm and appearing on deck the next morning ready for 15 or 16 more hours work," she said. "The immigration officer is frequently berated, insulted, threatened or cajoled but his course is invariably the same; he carries out the intent of the law even while sometimes his common sense and his heart may be telling him that the law is unfair to the particular individual. It is here that the immigration official is blamed for the law—unfairly blamed for something beyond his control.

"One finds the immigration officer going out on warrant cases, taking his life in his hands sometimes—going into communities of ill-favored dangerous alien criminals and invariably finding the man he wants. I find him appearing before the courts on these cases—presenting evidence with intelligent, unbiased presence and then carrying out the deportation orders, often in danger of his life through threats from the criminal's friends. All of this is done without ballyhoo or fanfare because the immigration man carrying out the purpose actuating him when he starts out cannot let his presence be known—must often travel without uniform and sometimes without even credentials and must use his own ingenuity to get himself out of difficulties."

Mrs. Charles Hamlin Presides at Dinner

At the head table with Miss Ward were also Mrs. Wilbur W. Hubbard, president of the club, the Misses Conrad and Mrs. Reginald Perry.

John H. Fahey, chairman of the Home Loan Bank Board, and Mrs. Fahey, fellow Bay Staters, were among the guests attending the dinner. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Keating were there, entertaining a group of friends including Representative and Mrs. James Meade and Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Hyatt, as were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clement who have as their guests Mr. and Mrs. LeGrand W. Perce. Among others at the dinner were Mrs. A. F. Kempton, Mrs. George Eckles, Mrs. E. L. Huffman and Mrs. Arlene Spangler.

Meeting to Coincide With National Congress of D. A. R., Week-End of April 23; Pageant to Open Program.

More than 300 members of the Children of the American Revolution are expected to come to Washington the week-end of April 23 for the annual convention of the society, held simultaneously with the national congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Plans for the sessions were made yesterday at the March meeting of the national board at which Mrs. William H. Pouch, of New York, national president, presided.

The C. A. R., for the first time, will have its sessions at Memorial Continental Hall. The opening program on Saturday, April 23, will present the activities of the societies in the form of a pageant. The afternoon session will be conducted by the juniors and devoted to reports. A highlight of the day will be a visit to the White House, where Mrs. Roosevelt will receive the young delegates at 11:15 in the morning.

Sunday will be given over to pilgrimages, one to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, a trip to Mount Vernon, with luncheon at Gadsby's Tavern in Alexandria, and a ceremony at the Capitol in the afternoon at the statues of the signers of the Constitution.

Other plans for the conference include a stunt night program for delegates, of which Miss Myra Hazard is chairman, and a dinner dance at the Sulgrave Club, with Mrs. Lee R. Pennington in charge.

Mrs. Frank Ray is chairman of arrangements for the ceremonies at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier; Miss Marie Beyerle of the trip to Mount Vernon, and Mrs. Frank Mondell of hospitality for the convention. The C. A. R.s will have a candy concession during the week of the D. A. R. Congress and Mrs. William Wagner is chairman of this.

The society has made strides in membership during the past three months, having added 1,000, including the 30 taken in at yesterday's meeting, according to the report of Mrs. Ryland C. Bryant, membership chairman. The recently inaugurated cradle roll is responsible for part of the new members and the efforts of the national president, who has visited all of the State D. A. R. and C. A. R. conventions and presented the work of the society in talks and motion pictures, were also credited by Mrs. Bryant with the widespread interest in the organization.

Mrs. John Morrison Kerr reported five new societies, bringing the number to nearly 550. A traveling C. A. R. banner will go to the State showing the largest increase in membership each year.

Each State society has "adopted" a naval vessel named for a ship in the Continental Navy, a battle or a hero of the Revolution. A letter from the Navy Department yesterday stated there were 45 so named and gave a description of each ship and facts for the information of the young Americans who have "adopted" it. The societies will direct part of their study to the history linked with the naming of the vessel and will also follow the ship's activities, receive its papers and correspond with its officers and sailors.

Several State histories were presented to the society yesterday, among them one prepared by Mrs. James Leake Stirling, State director for Louisiana. With it she gave pictures of Revolutionary patriots who took part in the taking of Baton Rouge from the Spanish governor in 1779. They were presented in the name of the Joseph Saveroit Society.

International School Party

Thomson School, where nearly 200 of the 650 students are children of foreign-born parents, last night presented its second annual international program under the auspices of the Parent-Teacher Association. Polish, German, Greek, Italian, Mexican, Dutch and Hawaiian pupils and parents participated, wearing native costume and presenting the songs and dances of their homelands.

Mrs. Harriet Wienges, president of the Parent-Teacher Association presided and R. M. Eaves, principal of the school, arranged the program.

One of the striking features of the entertainment was a group of colorful Polish folk songs and dances presented by the Community Center classes held at the school. Other numbers were recitations in German by Gustav Norwood, a young German boy; folk songs by the Italian class of the Community Center, a vocal solo by Mary Maiololesi, accompanied by George Bently, and a piano solo by John Schetto.

The Mexican numbers were a tango by Eugene Ysita and Ethel Kroger of International House and songs of Old Mexico by Martha Menette. George McCauley played Hawaiian melodies.

In addition to the program, there was a display of embroideries, rugs, pottery, pictures, costumes and shawls, from the various countries from which parents of the school children have come.

Mount Saint Mary's To Stage Prom Here

For the first time in the history of the school—it is now in its 128th year—Mount St. Mary's College at Emmitsburg, Md., will hold its annual junior prom off the college campus. The dance will be held April 30 at the Wardman Park Hotel. The students from Emmitsburg will remain in the city over the week-end for sightseeing tours.

Mrs. Emily Blair And Son Guests Of Pen Women

Tell How They Worked on First Published Mystery Novel.

Mrs. Emily Porter Blair and her son, Halbert C. Porter, whose pen name is H. L. Blair, were among the guests of honor yesterday at the book review luncheon of the District of Columbia Branch of the League of American Pen Women, and told how they collaborated on their first published novel, "Three Saw the Murder." Mrs. Theodore Tiller, who is chairman of the monthly luncheon programs, introduced them.

The book was not accepted for publication until after it had been revised in accordance with suggestions from publishers with rejection slips, Mr. Porter said. He and his mother both like mystery stories, which accounts for their writing one. They laid it in a place in Maine, where they lived before coming to Washington—Nickerson Lake—which they knew so well there would be no confusion in working out the action there, he explained.

Mrs. Blair defended the mystery tale as an entertaining form of fiction, and asserted she had no patience with authors who produced that type of story and then apologized for it. "If it provides a few hours of entertainment and relaxation, it has served its purpose, and why make apology for it?" she asked. She termed herself an addict, reading from three to seven a week.

Another author guest at the luncheon was Eleanor Elliott Carroll, of Baltimore, who has 13 books to her credit and is under contract for four more. Mrs. Tiller reviewed "Stormy Petrel," her latest, which is the love story of an independent young Virginia girl. It has the happy ending, characteristic of Mrs. Carroll's stories. She has another, "Chariot of the Sun," coming out in two weeks which, she said, points out the fact that older persons as well as young ones are apt to create havoc when they start out to "set the world on fire."

Mrs. Carroll confessed she picked up suggestions for her plots from the girls of the Maryland School for Women, most of whom she knew, and who often confided in her about their love affairs. The characters, however, are always fictitious and never follow closely the actual experiences of any of the friends who give her ideas, she said.

Among those at the luncheon was Mrs. J. P. Wilde, of Chicago, who was the guest of Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, wife of Senator Copeland.

As program director of N. B. C. in Chicago for five years, Mrs. Wilde was responsible for putting Amos and Andy on the air in their first broadcast.

Mrs. Virginia Mankin, a new member of the Pen Women, is author of "Virginia Code," a new book soon to come off the press.

Among others were Mrs. Porter, wife of the author; Mrs. Estelle T. Steel, former owner and editor of the Mechanicsburg (Pa.) Daily Journal, who was for some years a member of the women's press gallery on the Hill; Mrs. Charles Ruth, Mrs. Otto T. Englehart, Mrs. Edward R. Seal, one of the recent members of the District of Columbia Branch; Mrs. Sterling Bockoven, Mrs. Fannie M. Foster, Mrs. Robert J. Bates, Mrs. Thomas W. Cooke, Mrs. Josephus C. Trimble, Mrs. Nell V. Smith, Mrs. D. A. McDougall, Mrs. Clara Manderschied, Katherine M. Hopson, Blanche Parker Nelson, Miss Marguerite Merigold, president of the District of Columbia Branch; Mrs. M. C. Reid, Mrs. B. Shanks Cheney, vice chairman of the book review luncheons; Mrs. Charles Lonard Chambers, Mrs. Frederick L. Pratt, Mrs. Arthur P. Thayer, Mrs. O. E. Reed, Mrs. W. W. Badgley, Mrs. Charles P. Keyser, president of the Entre Nous Club; Mrs. William W. Scott, Mrs. Otis J. Rogers, Mrs. Cleveland A. Newton and Mrs. William Sault.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace H. Powers, of St. Albans, Vt., are at the Carlton, accompanied by Miss Jane Corliss and their daughter, Miss Betty Powers. Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Durham, jr., of Chicago, and Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Patterson, of Coral Gables, are also at that hotel.

THE SNOWSTORM spoiled something yesterday—the March outing of the District-girdling members of the Chevy Chase Club's nature section. The members, nine of them, already have taken 14 milestones in their walks.

Yesterday they had planned to start from the place they left off last month, milestone No. 3, beyond the large cornerstone at Chesapeake Junction, near Oxon Run in the Fort Dupont section. they drive to their starting point and then walk "over hill and down dale"—wherever the surveyor's route takes them. Sometimes they make but one milestone in a trip and sometimes go as many as five. Only the hardy members of the club have joined their expeditions, which are led by Mrs. Harold C. Bryant, chairman of the section, and Mrs. Lloyd Sutton, vice chairman. These two go out together as pathfinders a few days ahead of the monthly hike so as to make sure they do not lead the members astray and miss any milestones.

MRS. ROBERTA CAMPBELL LAWSON, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, is scheduled to talk on Indian Music March 28, before the music section of the Chevy Chase Clubs, at whose meeting she will be an honored guest. She also was to have given a program March 18 at the University of Maryland, but this has been cancelled because of a conflict in dates.

In the West she often appears for such lecture recitals in her Indian costume, but she has left it at her home in Tulsa, for her experience has been that, once wearing it, she is besieged with demands that she do so time and again.

Mrs. Lawson's home contains one of the finest private collections of Indian handicraft, arrowheads and other relics, in the country. She also is author of a book, "Indian Music Programs."

• • • •

THE ART SECTION of the Chevy Chase Club, by the way, is going on a trip to Baltimore, March 31, which has been arranged by its chairman, Mrs. Henry DeCoursey Adams, to view an exhibition of the work of Maryland artists at the Baltimore Art Museum.

• • • •

MRS. ADAMS, in addition to being chairman of the art section, is interested in other organization activities, among them those of the Florence Circle of the Florence Crittenton Home. She will be hostess Monday afternoon at a meeting of the group, with Mrs. Frederick M. Kerby, Mrs. Earl Putnam and Mrs. Fred Mitchell as assistant hostesses.

• • • •

THE SAME DAY, the Chevy Chase Florence Crittenton Circle will have a luncheon at the home of Mrs. George Sullivan, 4400 Sixteenth street, to which members will take cheer packages.

• • • •

THE PRO MUSICA QUARTET this afternoon will present the last of the series of three concerts being given at the Phillips Memorial Gallery under auspices of the Washington Committee to Aid Children of Spanish Democracy. The program will include Fantasia, a composition by Frederick Dvonch, member of the quartet. Other numbers will be Mozart's Quintet No. 3 in E flat major, and Debussy's Quintet, Opus 10. Other members of the quartet are Jeno Sevely, also a violinist; Ralph Hersh, violinist, and William Brennand, cellist; Mrs. Charles Putnam, member of the committee, will introduce the artists.

AND, speaking of benefits, it is good news to those interested in aiding the war sufferers in China that the recent tea and fashion show held by the Chinese Women's Association brought the fund to $6,000. This has been raised since the association was formed last July. A check for $1,500, including the $1,300 proceeds from the most recent benefit, was sent to Mme. Chaing Kai-shek last week through the Bank of China in New York.

Mme. Z. T. Ing, chairman of the benefit, has announced as winners of the special prizes Mrs. L. E. Rübel, who received the cloisonne set; Mrs. Ida Lee, member of the association, the embroidered satin skirt, and Mrs. John Hasely and Mrs. Delano, carved ivory bracelets and mandarin coat.

The next meeting of the association will be held at the Chinese embassy, April 2 at 2:30, and will be a tea to which special guests will be invited.

• • • •

The Friday program for the Congressional Club will be a travelogue of Hawaii, five reels in sound and color. At the tea table will be Mrs. John McSweeney, Mrs. Wilburn Cartwright, Mrs. John J. Cochran and Mrs. Charles H. Leavy.

On the hospitality committee are Mrs. Albert E. Carter, Mrs. Alfred J. Elliott and Mrs. Frank E. Hook.

Winter Wonderland at Rock Creek Park

The 2.3 inches of beautiful—and somewhat soggy—snow that enshrouded the Capital yesterday gave a fairyland touch to fields and woods. The above scene was typical of many in Rock Creek Park as the season's largest snow fell.

Orphans of the Storm

Bodies Fighting Blindness Back Venereal Drive

Every organization for the preservation of sight throughout the country is supporting the Nation-wide campaign against venereal disease, Mrs. Eleanor Brown Merrill, of New York City, associate director of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness told the annual meeting of the District Society at the Y. W. C. A. yesterday.

"Syphillis and gonorrhea are the greatest destroyers of vision the world has known," Mrs. Merrill said. "Their extermination would reduce blindness more than all the work societies such as ours could hope."

Mrs. Merrill praised the eight-point program of the District group, which, like other societies for the prevention of blindness, is an independent organization.

The program includes pre-natal care, legislative measures to eradicate possibilities of blindness from infant disease, pre-school examinations, eye-saving classes, public occulists, an industrial and lighting survey, "follow up" eye clinics and general education in eye care.

Mrs. William Holland Wilmer, who presided, was re-elected president. Other officers re-elected included Mrs. Allen L. Vories, first vice president; Dr. S. B. Muncaster, second vice president; Dr. James N. Greear, treasurer; Mrs. Louis B. Castell, recording secretary; Mrs. Howard G. Nichols, corresponding secretary and Mrs. Mary Hopper Spencer, executive director.

Mrs. Spencer read a report of the activities of the society for the past year.

Edward Blundon Rites Tomorrow

Funeral services of F. Edward Blundon, 44, who died yesterday at the home of his parents, 10000 Georgia avenue, Silver Spring, Md., will be held tomorrow at 3 p. m. at the Georgia avenue address. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

A native of Virginia, Mr. Blundon came to Washington in his infancy and attended public schools here before joining his father in the real estate business. He was the vice president of his father's company, the Francis A. Blundon Co., 805 H street northwest.

Besides his parents, Mr. Blundon is survived by several aunts and uncles. He was a bachelor, and his only brother, Victor, died about 18 months ago while on a cruise to Costa Rica.

Otis Lowe, 41, Dies; Advertising Man

Otis Lowe, 41, formerly a member of the advertising staff of The Washington Post, died yesterday at Dallas, Tex., following an operation for appendicitis. He had gone to Texas recently to recuperate after three weeks of illness at the George town Hospital.

A native of Louisiana, Mr. Lowe came to Washington from Texas about seven months ago to join the staff of The Post. While here he made his home in Falls Church Va.

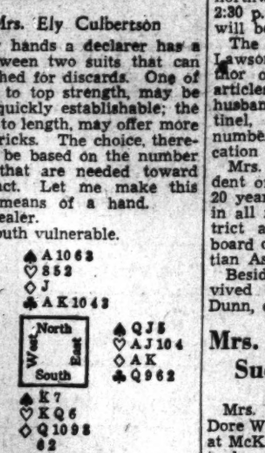
Contract

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

In many hands a declarer has a choice between two suits that can be established for discards. One of them, due to top strength, may be the more quickly establishable; the other, due to length, may offer more potential tricks. The choice, therefore, must be based on the number of tricks that are needed toward the contract. Let me make this clear by means of a hand.

North, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	1 N T	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	2 N T	Pass
3 N T	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
Pass

East started in to "trap" from the very first moment that North opened the bidding with a club. With North-South vulnerable, East felt that any fairly high contract they reached could probably be punished severely, whereas there was no assurance that he himself could make a game. As is happened, however, he over-rated his defensive strength against the three notrump that was finally reached.

West understood the penalty double to mean that East had the club suit well stopped, hence opened the eight-spot. If declarer had taken a superficial view of the hand and had finessed the opening lead to his own jack, on the assurance that this would at once establish four club tricks, the contract would have been automatically beaten. West would have taken his club queen and shifted to a heart, and declarer would have been held to four clubs, two hearts and two spades.

Declarer made no such error in the calculation of needed tricks. He saw that four club tricks would not be enough and, therefore, considered his longer diamond suit as the source of tricks. He saw that if East's double was sound, West could probably never get on lead, or at least not until it was too late to do damage. Therefore, instead of finessing the opening lead, the club king was played and the diamond jack was then led. East took the king and shifted to a low heart. Declarer won and continued the establishment of diamonds. East took his second diamond trick, but then was helpless—all he could get was the heart ace. He never took a club, nor a spade trick.

Wife Claims Man And Nurse Robbed, Beat, Drugged Her

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, March 10.—A hotel employe testified today in the "fantastic" robbery and assault trial of Maxwell Pearce and Margaret Gordon that he helped carry Pearce's wife into a hotel here in 1936.

Mrs. Pearce accused Pearce, former hotel manager, and Miss Gordon, a Cleveland nurse, of drugging and beating her and robbing her of $150,000. She charged she was brought from Cleveland to Pittsburgh and imprisoned in a hotel without food or water for three days.

R. M. Derrick, 27, chief of service at a Pittsburgh hotel, testified he had helped carry Mrs. Pearce into the hotel because she could not walk.

Dr. H. W. Pracht, the Pearce family physician, testified he found Mrs. Pearce in the hotel in extreme mental collapse and unable to walk. He said she talked incoherently, and was bruised on the face, legs and hips.

He also testified he had treated Pearce at least a dozen times and once sent him to a hospital for acute alcoholism.

Mayfair Party On Birthday Is Great Success

Clairvoyants, Singers Are Drawing Crowds at Night Clubs Here.

By Chanticleer

That Mayfair birthday party yesterday had everything and, appropriately enough, everybody was there. If anyone entered the Cafe of All Nations without realizing March 10 was the third anniversary of its opening, he was immediately reminded of the very special occasion when he received a boutonniere as gift of the management.

Free wine and cocktails flowed with every lunch and dinner served from noon until closing, while Chef Everhard's culinary genius made each patron feel it was his birthday too. Entertainers at the Thirteenth street rendezvous included Perry Martin at the piano; Beverly Stull, with his accordion; Nedra Andrea, vocalist; the Continental Trio, and Countess H. De Bournat, whose clairvoyant powers bare the past and future.

And speaking of clairvoyance, Prince Mogul, chief soothsayer of the Shoreham Cocktail Lounge, has established himself as one of the Capital's favorite topics of conversation. Flocks of citizens, hearing of the prince's astonishing feats in the mind-reading realm, are stepping into the Shoreham Lounge to check up for themselves.

The rumor is that an even dozen Congressmen within the last week have requested the seer to focus his psychic powers on the coming mid-term elections. You may not be up for re-election in November yourself, but Prince Mogul will make himself at home with your past and future in a most diverting manner. He's in the Lounge from 4:30 to 6:30 and from 10 to midnight daily, and his consultation doesn't cost a cent.

From the castanets and rumba of Old Mexico, the Pall Mall Room of the Hotel Raleigh switches next Wednesday to the grass skirts and hula of Hawaii. Glamorous Hawaiian gals will decorate each patron with the traditional lei when he enters the Pall Mall Room.

Over at the Shar-Zad Room in the Carlton Evelyn Oakes is winning an enthusiastic following for her vocal numbers with the Frank Gagen Orchestra. Evelyn comes to us via New York, but she hasn't lost the charming accent of the Lone Star State, where she was born in Dallas 22 years ago. Requests for her interpretation of "Dipsy Doodle" pop up several times per evening at the Carlton.

Sy Wallick, the lad in the Wardman Park Capitol Cocktail Lounge who turns out those excellent charcoal portraits in just about 100 seconds flat, received some of his training in the studio of Max Fleischer, creator of "Popeye."

Sarah Knott Talks To Physical Group

National awareness of the folk life of America is traceable to the revival of community life during the depression, Sarah Gertrude Knott, director of te National Folk Festival, declared last night at a meeting of the District Women's Physical Education Association.

The fifth annual national festival, which will be held in Constitution Hall in May—under sponsorship of the Washington Post Folk Festival Association—will have no trained performers on its program, Miss Kontt said.

A committee was appointed to further interest in the festival among students and faculties of local schools as follows: Elizabeth Molster, Mrs. Katherine DeShazo and Mrs. Elizabeth Angle, supervisors of physical education in the public schools, and Elizabeth Andrews, principal of Bancroft School.

Expert Proves 800 M.P.H. Fly Is Impossible

Dr. Langmuir Demolishes Story With Cold Mathematics.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 10.—The speed of the deerfly—which scientists have called the fastest thing alive—was reduced from its 800-mile-an-hour record to a mere 26 today in experiments announced in science by Dr. Irving Langmuir.

Dr. Langmuir went into his laboratory and made imitation deerflies which flew with precision equal to that of his chemical experiments which won him the $50,000 Nobel Prize. He calculated mathematically what would happen, with a deerfly at 800 miles an hour and the effect was terrific.

The wind pressure against the fly, he found, would be 8 pounds a square inch, probably enough to crush the insect. It would take one-half horsepower a second for the fly to keep up the speed.

The fly would have to burn up one and one-half times its own weight every second to produce the energy needed.

And, if a deerfly flying 800 miles an hour, hit a human being in the face, the fly would penetrate deeply into the flesh.

With these mathematics out of the way, Dr. Langmuir swung imitation deerflies on the ends of threads to test the statements of Dr. Charles H. T. Townsend. The latter, in the journal of the New York Entomological Society, reported seeing a deerfly going 600 miles an hour in Mexico.

Thes fly passed him, Dr. Townsend said, "with incredible velocity" and could be seen as "only a brownish blur."

Dr. Langmuir's artificial flies were whirled at measured speeds ranging from 13 to 64 miles and hour. They were against a good, white background for clear seeing.

At 26 miles an hour, the Nobel winner reports, the flies were "merely a blur." At 64 they were invisible. He concludes that 26 miles is close to the correct speed.

This leaves the highest living speed record at present to the eagle, with about 180 miles an hour actually measured during a swoop.

ST. JOHN'S WINS, EASTERN IS BEATEN IN TOURNEY

This Morning

Harris Hopes Rookies Will Deliver.

By Shirley Povich.

Orlando, Fla.

With no compunctions whatsoever, Stanley Raymond Harris is inviting two rookies in the Nats' camp to push his good friends, Joe Kuhel and Al Simmons, out of their jobs on the Washington Club. Bucky Harris is no sentimentalist. He hopes young Jimmy Wasdell and the equally youthful George Case are clever enough to run his pals Kuhel and Simmons right out of the regular positions.

POVICH.

Because in that eventuality, Mr. Harris will have come up with a pair of very fine rookies indeed and his own job as manager of the Washington Club will be not only of longer duration but a deal happier.

Harris has made no secret of his hopes and is willing to risk any defection in his friendship with his two veterans. "C'est la Guerre," said Harris in his best French. "That's baseball for you. This game wrecks friendship except the deep, understanding kind. A manager is always confronted with distasteful tasks like demoting a fellow who has been his pal.

"I have one paramount duty," said Harris. "That is to produce the best ball club that I can with the material Mr. Griffith has given me. He expects it and I dare say the Washington fans do. It's a duty to myself also. If those two rookies can overshadow Simmons and Kuhel, that will be fine as far as the ball club is concerned."

Expects Good Club.

The Nats' manager took a long pull at a cigarette, mechanically snapped it a good 30 feet and muttered "Whathaell." He had a new thought in the matter.

"Don't forget, Simmons and Kuhel will have no squawk if Case and Wasdell get their jobs. It's the law of compensation, or something. That's how Simmons and Kuhel got into the big leagues—by taking the jobs of a couple of older fellows. Some manager gave them a break. Well, I'm giving Case and Wasdell a break. It's up to Simmons and Kuhel to hold their own jobs. They'll get a fair shake from me, they know that. Whatever may come of the situation is strictly up to them.

"But you can't blame me for hoping my rookies will make good. Any young fellow who can beat out Kuhel for the first base job will make us a great ball player. And the fellow who beats out Simmons this year will be a great outfielder for us. Add two young fellows like that to our ball club and we'll have something."

Competition may be a disguised blessing for both Kuhel and Simmons. The Nats' veteran first baseman has always been secure in his job for the past seven seasons and the presence of a youth who is bidding seriously for it may incite Kuhel to loftier things. Simmons last season had no competition for his position with the exception of Freddie Sington and was not required to put out much effort to hold his job. With Case on the premises, however, Simmons may be inspired to turn in one of his finest seasons.

Needs Competition.

Kuhel's predecessor at first base for the Nats—Joe Judge—was one who always required the presence of a challenger for his job before he could perform at his peak. When he was the club's only first baseman, Judge was prone to play well within himself. But when a challenger appeared on the scene, Judge magically reached new heights and made a comparative bum out of the brash fellows who thought they might oust him.

It was so evident at one point during Judge's career that Clark Griffith used to moan that he was forced to pay the salaries of two first basemen before he could get a good season's work out of one—Judge. At least a dozen first basemen had a fling at Judge's job—notably Frank Brower, Art Shires, Harley Boss, George Sisler, Eddie Onslow and, finally Kuhel. Kuhe took it over in 1932, the last year of Walter Johnson's regime.

In striking contrast was the career of Ossie Bluege with the Nats. Bluege, the pinnacle of grace and mold of form at third base, was the forgotten man on the Washington ball team for a dozen years in one sense. They put him on third base and forgot about him for the simple reason that they never had to worry about the position. Bluege never needed any competition to elicit his finest efforts. He always played the best he knew how and for 12 years Griffith was saved the cost of another utility outfielder.

Saw His Successor.

When Bluege was slowing up, he was the first to admit it. In fact, it happened one day down here two years ago at Tinker Field. A 19-year-old youth named Buddy Lewis, fresh from Chattanooga went out to third base in fielding practice one morning, and Bluege watched. A bit later, young Lewis stepped up to the bat to face some pitching and Bluege watched long and intently.

When Lewis finally trudged to the dressing room after the workout, Ossie Bluege emerged from the dugout and pointed toward the disappearing youth. "There," said Bluege, "is my successor. He'll take this third base job right away from me. And I won't be disgraced, either."

Dean, 'Silent Man of St. Pete,' Strangest of Baseball Wonders

By Paul Mickelson.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 10.—Strangest of all wonders seen by touring fans and baseball writers this spring training season is the "Silent Man of St. Pete," who is none other than Mr. Dizzy Dean of the Yell County, Arkansas, Deans.

The Great Man, undisputed holder of all major league pop-off championships over the last six years, has undergone a baffling change of pace that has his old admirers scratching divots from their heads. Instead of his old, swaggering self, Ol' Diz has adopted the first rule of his brief kindergarten days—"little boys should be seen and not heard."

So ably has Diz succeeded in his strange role that several visiting authors have come and gone at the thriving St. Louis gashouse camp without even seeing or talking to the great man who always filled their notebooks with red hot wisecracks and left them half-witted from laughter. One writer even mistook him for Mr. Robert Moses (Lefty) Grove, perennial champ of big league dead pans.

There are many reasons behind Diz's strange reversal of oratorical form. One, of course, is that Mr. Branch Rickey, after all these years of trying, finally revenged himself on Diz for the pitcher's flop season last year and moved right in on him. Ricky hurt Diz's dignity and spirit, by going around the country after the close of the '37 season and saying the Cards weren't even depending on the Great Dean. Then he cornered Diz, offered him a cut in salary and gave him such a talk on the philosophy of the better life that Diz reach for the cut-price contract and the pen and ink like a half-starved rookie. For the first time in five years, Diz failed to become a holdout.

Touring burglars also helped the Cardinal cause in the case of their Great Man. One night, they busted into Diz's home and ransacked it of some $5,000 worth of jewelry. It is reported that when Diz first learned of the robbery, he moaned:

"Now I gotta sign up with Rickey. I gotta get some more of those rocks." Sad to relate, Diz carried no insurance as far as is known.

Even a golf tournament came to Rickey's rescue. At long odds, Diz is supposed to have wagered $1,000 on himself to win a tournament against far superior players, but his baseball pitching didn't count and he failed to finish in the first flight.

But probably the biggest reason of all for Diz's silence is his spirit of revenge against newspapermen. While most of them have been more than fair to him, spreading his senseless guff all over the sports pages, Diz feels some of the writing boys haven't done right by their hero. Those he likes will get him to speak a few words; those he dislikes get nothing but a shrug of his shoulders and the cold stare. For instance:

Martin McCarthy, sports editor of the Chicago Times, approached Dean for an elucidating statement. McCarthy is the boss of Irving Kupcinet, who came to the rescue of Jack Miley, of New York, when the whole Cardinal team pounced on Jack in the lobby of the Tampa Terrace Hotel for an anti-Dean story last spring.

"What paper?" asked Diz.

McCarthy told him.

"Nothing doing," growled Diz, walking away. Later, however, he joined in a discussion of the Chicago Cubs as McCarthy got what is now considered a mild scoop.

Another writer, one of Diz's best friends, was stupefied when the pitcher turned him cold on an interview. Later, he told Diz he'd never write about him again. Diz realized his mistake and did everything to effect a reconciliation, but got the icy stare.

However, most writers are grateful for Diz's reformation. Especially is this true of the scribes who follow the club. With Diz in a silent man role they now can ease up, enjoy quiet dinners and movies without worrying about an explosion by the Great Man as soon as their backs are turned toward a steak.

And the change seems good for Diz, too. He looks great and the bet is he'll step out this year and make 20 victories look as easy as a drop from the waterwagon.

Monroe High Beats Locals By 24 to 23

St. John's Prep Wins Over Asheville Five by 42-17.

By Jack Munhall.

A Staff Correspondent.

Lexington, Va., March 10. A quarter of the teams from the District and nearby Maryland gained only an even break in their opening jousts with Dixie's best school boy entries as the South Atlantic basketball tournament was launched here today with morning, afternoon and evening contests.

The most surprising result in a hectic day of form-reversals which saw the elimination of the first and second seeded teams was the 25-24 defeat of Eastern, Washington interhigh champion, at the hands of an aleart Monroe A. and M. (Ga.) five.

The most impressive showing of any District entry was made by St. John's city champion outfit which reached a new high for smooth passing and crack shooting in trouncing Asheville (N. C.) High School, 42-17. It was the high score of the day.

Maryland's representatives were as different as Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase Wins.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase, playing the second morning game of the program, again proved that its zone defense is most puzzling when first encountered by turning back third seeded Lanier (N. C.) High School, 28 to 25.

But Briarley's six-man squad found the pace too hot and after offering stubborn opposition for three periods bowed to a rugged Staunton Military Academy team, 42 to 25. Although none too potent, Staunton had little difficulty with Brairley in the finel eight minutes and won going away.

Bethesda's gratifying triumph was the handiwork of young Carrol Hayden, its sharpshooting forward, who poured 13 points through the hoops to tie for high scoring honors in a losing cause. He shared the point, getting laurels with the 6-foot-7-inch Joe Murrow, the losers' center, and a very unsociable fellow under either basket, but Mr. Murrow could not offset Mr. Hayden and his mate, Pete Kimmel, Bill Morell and Louis Vannais, who turned in clever passing exhibitions in feeding Hayden.

Giebel Stars Again.

Jim Giebel, St. John's title pivot man who was recently named Washington's outstanding schoolboy player, made a bid for a berth on the all-tournament five in leading the Johnnies to a convincing victory.

The 19-year-old Giebel, who reportedly is heading for Georgetown, scored 19 points, a total unsurpassed by any performer in the first-round games. Giebel also proved invaluable under the baskets for he was the lone Johnny who could see eye to eye with the towering North Carolinians. The more seen of the various teams, the more it became alarmingly obvious that St. John's is the smallest squad in the tournament.

Their size, however, was not noticeable as Joe Gallagher, an all-

Tommy Farr Favored Tonight In Return Fight With Max Baer

17,000 Expected to See Former Champion Meet Man Who Severely Beat Him in England.

By Eddie Brietz,

Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, March 10.—The parade of heavyweights will continue across the boards at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night with Max Baer, former champion and Tommy Farr, holder of the British Empire title, the principals in the 15-round main event.

Farr is a 5-7 betting choice notwithstanding he has dropped both his starts here. Most fight men pick him because he beat Baer in London last April and because he has been fighting more regularly than the Californian. It will be Baer's first ring appearance since he knocked out Ben Foord in nine rounds in May.

Promoter Mike Jacobs tonight predicted a crowd of 17,000 customers and a gross gate of approximately $75,000.

There is very little betting and virtually none on a knockout largely because it is impossible to tell just how Mr. Baer will be feeling at post time. When he's good he's very good and when he's bad he's the limit.

Many keen observers who have visited Baer's camp at Lakewood, N. J., say if Maxie will walk in and punch he can knock Farr out. If he elects to fight tomorrow night as he did against Jimmy Braddock, the experts say he is a sure loser.

Farr, making his first start under the managerial wing of Joe Gould, who piloted Braddock to the title, probably will adopt different tactics than in his title bout with Joe Louis and his later meeting with Braddock.

The Welshman has altered his style to add a more effective style of attack. In his workouts at Summit he has displayed a punching power conspicuously lacking in previous bouts.

Tiger Jack Fox, of Spokane, Wash., and Jersey Joe Wollcott, of Camden, N. J., will clash in the six-round semifinal. Two other sixes will send Charley Massera, of Pittsburgh against Phil Sommese, of New York, and Buddy Ryan, of Newark, against Herbie Katz, of Brooklyn.

Miley, Berg Enter Finals

By the Associated Press.

Belleair, Fla., March 10.—Spectacular putting carried Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., to a notable victory today over Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, six times national champion, in their semi-final match of the Belleair Women's Open Golf Tournament.

Tommorow, Miss Miley faces Patty Berg, of Minneapolis who is out to gain her sixth winter championship, having swept easily through her semi-final match today with Bernice Wall, Oshkosh, Wis, 6 and 5.

Miss Miley's putter worked like magic today. She had six one-putt greens on the first 12 holes, sinking them from distances ranging from 12 to 40 feet. She was two up on Glenna at the turn and made it three on the eleventh. Then, the former national champion rallied to take the thirteenth and fourteenth but could never overcome the Miley lead. They halved the next four holes, Mrs. Vare's putt hitting the back of the cup on the eighteenth but failing to drop.

Two up at the turn on Miss Wall, Patty swept four more holes on the backward nine to clinch the match. Miss Wall had a pickup on the sixth.

Smith Bags A 65; Leads With a 131

Missourian Is 11 Under Par in Hollywood Open Play.

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, Fla., March 10 (AP).—Horton Smith, the tall Missourian, who was the tournament golfing scourge a decade ago, showed the boys a 65 today and ensconsed himself far in front in the $3,000 Hollywood Open with a 36-hole 131—11 strokes below par.

Smith's 65 bettered by one shot the competitive course record he established yesterday, and his total represented one of the lowest 36-hole scores ever tabulated on a par 71 course. Jimmy Thomson, of Shawnee, Pa., carded the same figure in the recent Los Angeles Open.

The smiling blond professional, who lives in Springfield, Mo., and registers from the Oak Park Country Club in suburban Chicago, made the Orange Brook links, with broad fairways and well-trapped greens, look like a Tom Thumb course.

He missed several greens, but so deadly was his putting and chipping that he never once went over par. He dropped a half dozen putts of 10 feet or longer and several times pitched next the pin for sure pars and birdies.

Five Birdies.

Smith canned a sizeable putt for his par on the first hole, then birdied five of the next six. He rounded the turn in 31 and equaled par on each of the next eight holes. As a fitting climax to a great round, he sent a 20-foot putt skimming into the cup on the last green for an incoming 34.

"There's no explaining it," Smith grinned. "It just happened. It's the best two rounds I ever put together, although I had a pair of 66's in the 1929 French Open, which I won on my twenty-first birthday."

Smith's fine golf took all the play away from 20 others who smashed par today.

His card:

Out—Par	443	544	534	—36
Smith	432	443	434	—31
In—Par	443	443	544	—35—71
Smith	443	443	543	—34—65

Ed Oliver, of Wilmington, Del., added a 68 to his previous 69 and found himself six strokes behind, at 137. Frank Moore, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., and Ky Laffoon, of Chicago, ripped off neat 67's and were tied at third place with 138's.

Denny Shute, of Boston, P. G. A. champion, and Harold (Jug) McSpaden, of Winchester, Mass., shot 69's, and Byron Nelson, of Reading, Pa., a 68, to tie at 139, eight strokes off the pace.

Wiffy Cox Slips.

Wiffy Cox, of Washington, who trailed Smith by only two strokes this morning, slipped to a 73 for a 141 total. In the same spot was

Bakers Win InBadminton

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Baker figured in winning four of the five titles in the finals of the District closed badminton championships played last night at the Kensington Armory. Joe and Kay, prominent in local tennis circles are playing only their second year at badminton. Their only defeat came in the men's singles when John Conroy took the measure of Joe.

Detton Gives Chief the Rush Act

Detton Beats Indian, but Only After Braving Many 'Dangers'

Dean Survives Painful Blows by Lady With Pocket-Book but Manages to Win, Anyhow.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Surviving three painful whacks over the head with a lady's pocketbook (large size), and a challenge to a duel from the coatless, bald-headed guy in the third row, east section, Dean Detton furthered his claim to a match with Bronko Nagurski by pinning Chief Thunderbird in the feature bout at Turner's Arena last night. It took him exactly 33½ minutes (E.S.T.)

As a whole, it was the best show put together up on W street this winter. There was gore aplenty. Hans Steinke tossed Referee "Cyclone" Burns, accidently of course, and Thunderbird socked Referee Benny Bortnick with a sizzling right hook to the left ear—not accidently. And two of the contestants ended their matches by grunting, "Pappa," quite audibly.

Al Marcus tossed Joss Rodriguez with a flying tackle in 14½ minutes; Pancho Valdez made Heine Olsen quit after 16½ minutes with a back necklock, after a bloody session; Hans Steinke drew with Orville Brown in 30 minutes, and Ram Singh made Dick Daviscourt quit after 22½ minutes with a Japanese leglock.

Evidently not the fair-haired boy of a year ago, Detton attacked Thunderbolt with undisguised fervor and proceeded to tie him into a couple of nautical knots. It wasn't all cricket, however, for Referee Bortnick accused him of employing a strangle hold on one occasion, and punching to the midsection with clenched fist on another.

At the ten-minute mark spectators in A row, (west section), were amazed to see the Injun come hurtling through the air at them without benefit of a trapeze. He made two attempts to return to the battle pit, but was thwarted by Detton. The third time he succeeded, only to be met with another "putsch," and bumped out at the very feet of the irate lady in A row south section).

Thunderbird grabbed a piece of ringside furniture and started after Detton, but Bortnick wouldn't let him return until he dropped the chair. The bald-headed gent over in Row C, east section, meanwhile had peeled off his coat and was daring Detton to come down and fight like a man. Detton said

D.C. Handball Pair Triumph

Washington and Baltimore's No. 1 doubles teams scored decisive victories in last night's semifinal round of the Junior National A. A. U. handball tourney at the Y. M. C. A., and will clash in the finals Saturday afternoon for the doubles crown.

The District's top-seeded duo, Schwartz-Pearlman, took a nip-and-tuck three-game match from Ellis Klein and George Wendlandt to enter the title round. Schwartz and Pearlman dropped the first game by a 20-21 count, but came from behind in the second game to win by the same narrow margin and pull up on even terms. The champions hit their stride in the third game to take the match at 21-11.

Continuing his sensational play from Wednesday night's singles play, Al Blum teamed with his Baltimore Y. M. H. A. doubles partner, Nat Rosenfield, to score a well-earned two-game victory over Randy Myers and George Newman, of the local "Y." The Baltimore champions were never in serious trouble and, despite heroic efforts on the part of Randy Myers, moved steadily through to a 21—13, 21—10 verdict.

Tonight's semifinal singles round features an all-star cast, with Jack Schwartz and Walter Plekan, of the Buffalo Y. M. C. A., clashing at 7:30 o'clock to open hostilities.

Time Out

By Chet Smith

"Miss Fitt heard Van Mungo was up for sale and she'd like to put in a bid!"

Thousands are filing their income tax returns this week. The Gallup Poll in Sunday's Post tells you what America thinks about a tax in 1939 on small incomes.

Walter Haight

I'm using this means of informing a limited number of persons that there is no truth in the rumor that I'm riding Aneroid back from California and that I won't be back home until Christmas. Of course, if you meet any of those who played Aneroid on my say so, I mean the real rabid ones, you might carry the joke along and tell them that reports from Los Angeles say that Haight was last seen heading East toward Santa Monica Mountains on a limping horse. Time is a great healer, and my gun-toting clients may forget it all before they are afforded an excellent target of my three chins in the Bowie press box next month.

HAIGHT.

To tell you the truth, thanks to a TWA airliner that purred me from coast to coast, I'm now at my old typewriter at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue, convinced that the grass only APPEARS to be greener in California.

However, there is not one word of truth in the rumor that I was forced off the plane at Albuquerque, N. Mex., so that the ship could take on 500 gallons of gas. From the nonchalant way in which the plane carried my 218 pounds and my baggage, consisting mostly of hotel towels, I am beginning to believe that it is possible for a turfwriter to be bouyant with his own hot air. Some day I'm going to straddle an outboard motor and see if I can't make a non-stop flight around my hat.

"Pennies From Heaven."

The fellow who wrote the song, "The Lady Is a Tramp," might have had chilblains when he penned "—don't like California, it's cold——" but he certainly had his eye on the ball when he continued with "—and it's damp." There are two songs that are barred on the West Coast now—"It Isn't Raining Rain, It's Raining Violets," and "Pennies From Heaven."

After ten days of hard rain, the Los Angeles natives gazed at the sky and saw the sun and the seat of my trousers, each trying to outshine the other. I taxied from the airport to the hotel and the clerk showed that California still retained a sense of humor by asking, "Do you want your room with or without swimming pool?" I didn't have my rubbers along, so I came back with "Give me an upper berth on the fifteenth floor."

Some Breakfast.

The next morning I ordered breakfast, and here and now I wish to make a correction. In one of my stories sent from Los Angeles there's a line that reads, "The waiter came into my room with my toast and coffee." Due to shortage of wires, or something, words were deleted.

That sentence should have read, "The waiter came into my room with my toast and coffee, a double order of cornflakes and cream, a triple order of country sausage

Victorious Ann, 11-1, Wins Tropical Sprint; Longshots Dominate

Mare, Long Idle, Draws Away From Favored Legenda in Stretch Run of Feature Race; Foul Claims Mark Opening Event.

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., March 10.—Victorious Ann, a black mare that had not been to the races since her winning effort at Laurel last October, won the 6 furlong fifth race, best offering on today's card, at the liberal odds of 11 to 1. Carrying the royal blue and ivory colors of Fanfare Farms, owned by F. L. Flanders; Michigan sportsman, the 5-year-old daughter of Victorian scored by a length in 1:12 3-5.

The Woolford Farm's Legenda, recently a galloping winner over similar company at Hialeah added to the woes of favorite players by finishing second in the field of $3,500 top and $3,000 bottom platers. Closing at odds of 9 to 10, the Insco filly took second money by three lengths from Mrs. G. H. Emick's Dark Sun. Seven horses started. Legenda was the fourth losing choice in five races.

After a good start, the race narrowed down to a two-horse issue, Legenda, which broke in front from the inside rail, opened up a length lead on Victorious Ann, while the others were several lengths behind. Kenneth McCombs kept Victorious Ann hot on the trail of the favorite and drew up to within a half length of the pacemaker upon entering the stretch. Legenda weakened in the final drive and allowed the long shot to win going away, thus adding to the upset list for the day. Dark Sun caught Light in the last quarter but was hard pressed to stave off Slump for the show.

The opening event, a half-mile juvenile test for maiden colts and geldings, saw Mrs. Payne Whitney's Romaunt burning up the talent's money by finishing far out of the picture. Considerable crowding took place from the start to the first turn and Romaunt, away none too well, appeared one of the chief victims.

Satin Marvel, a 10 to 1 shot, jumped to the front in a few strides and outfooted the field to win by a length and a half. Spanish Dot provided the chief contention and gained the place by a similar margin over Pit Terrier.

Jockey Cooper, who rode Spanish Dot, claimed foul against Ralph Eccard, who rode the winner. The stewards questioned these boys as well as Eddie Arcaro, who was on Romaunt, but the original result stood.

The 9-year-old Gold Thorn ran a powerful race to take the second purse by three-quarters of a length at odds of $19.50 for two. Amhurst edged Chance Queen, the pacemaker, out of the place in a photo decision. Chance Queen appeared sore going to the post but she displayed sharp speed into the last furlong, where Gold Thorn and Amhurst picked her up. Lady Bessie, backed into favoritism, broke fast but was outrun and wound up in the ruck.

Harris Sends Veteran Team Against Scrubs In Nat Game Sunday

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 10.—Stanley Harris tipped his hand today as he announced the line-ups of the Nats' first game of the training season, scheduled at Tinker Field Sunday.

The growing impression that the Nats' manager is not banking heavily on a single newcomer to the Washington squad, with the exception of pitchers, stood revealed in bolder relief tonight.

The so-called "first team" which will take the field against the scrubs on Sunday is comprised of a veteran in every position, notably Al Simmons and Joe Kuhel, whose jobs are supposedly threatened by rookie challengers.

Simmons not only has been assigned to the regulars, but he has been given the clean-up hitting role in fourth place. On his performances in training camp thus far, the big fellow has merited the job. He has been peppering the left-field fence, 380 feet distant, in the daily batting drills and has far overshadowed young George Case, his rival for the left-field post.

Despite his .270 batting average of last year, Simmons averaged more runs driven in per game than any other player on the club, except Johnny Stone, and Harris, today declared that "Simmons is the ideal fourth-place hitter if he can make a comeback."

There was further evidence also that Harris is definitely committed to a revision of his batting order. In Sunday's game, Buddy Myer will be batting in third place with Cecil Travis, the league's fourth leading hitter last season, demoted to sixth. Myer's run-producing habits have motivated the change.

The following line-ups for Sunday's battle were announced:

First Team.	Second Team.
Mel Almada, cf.	George Case, lf.
Buddy Lewis, 3b.	Ossie Bluege, 3b.
Buddy Myer, 2b.	Jim Weaver, 1b.
Al Simmons, lf.	Taft Wright, cf.
Johnny Stone, rf.	Johnny Mihalic, 2b.
Cecil Travis, ss.	Henry Elliott, rf.
Joe Kuhel, 1b.	George La Point, ss.
Rick Ferrell, c.	Tom Livingston, c.
Joe Krakauskas, p.	Joe Kohlman, p.
Monte Weaver, p.	Early Wynn, p.
Emil Leonard, p.	Pete Appleton, p.

Elliott and La Point are a pair of youths who are the property of the Charlotte club, a Washington subsidiary. They arrived today with Bobby Estallela, the swarthy Cuban, who may also find his way into the game Sunday as an outfielder. Elliott and La Point are a couple of years away from the big leagues, even the most optimistic admit.

Chief pitching interest on Sunday will attach to young Joe Kohlman, Early Wynn and Emil Leonard. The others—Krakauskas, Weaver and Appleton, will be simply taking routine workouts, but aforementioned trio will be battling for jobs on the Nats' staff.

It will be Harris' first view of Leonard's famed knuckle ball which is supposed to wobble and flutter to the great disgust of the hitter. He will also be watching young Wynn under fire for the first time. The latter is the darkest of the dark horses among the Nats' pitchers and an impressive performance on his part would create a stir here. Kohlman, of no-hit fame in the Eastern Shore League, will also be on the spot in facing the Nats' regulars.

Bucky Harris changed his plan to divide his unwieldy squad into morning and afternoon groups. Hereafter the rookies will stay off the field until the regulars are done with their practice. The sessions which formerly started at 10 a. m. and continued until noon, will be extended until 1 o'clock.

One ball player on the squad will take part in the practices of both the rookies and the regulars. He is George Case who has been commanded to chase every fly ball hit in batting practice. Coach Clyde Milan will make an acceptable outfielder out of young Chase or run him ragged in the attempt.

Taft Wright joined the long-distance hitters today with two solid swats against the right field fence. But Manager Harris would enthuse more if Wright were not a left-handed hitter. There is no room for another southpaw swinger on the Washington club.

Mickey Cochrane Wants to Catch This Season.

Lakeland, Fla., March 10 (U.P.).—Manager Mickey Cochrane of the Detroit Tigers said today that he would return to active catching duty if he could obtain the permission of Owner Walter Briggs. Briggs said last year that he would never permit Cochrane to catch again.

RED SOX.

Sarasota, Fla., March 10 (U.P.).—Manager Joe Cronin of the Boston Red Sox, following today's practice session, said that a regulation intraclub game will be played here Friday. The Sox play their first regular exhibition Sunday, meeting the Cincinnati Reds here.

Bobby Doerr will play second base for the Red Sox regulars as Eric McNair is still a holdout.

BEES.

Bradenton, Fla., March 10 (U.P.). Joe Walsh of Brookline, Mass., second-string shortstop of the Boston Bees, was ordered back to Boston today to have his ailing knee examined by Dr. H. G. Lee, eminent Boston bone specialist. Although Walsh has been regarded as a possible substitute for Rabbit Warstler, it now seems likely that the sub will be unable to play for several weeks at least.

ROLLIE HEMSLEY.

New Orleans, March 10 (U.P.).—"Rollicking Rollie" Hemsley, baseball's No. 1 bad boy, will be back with the Cleveland Indians Monday after a week's suspension, the United Press learned tonight.

Hemsley, who kicked over the traces and staged a riotous party Monday night, was shipped to his home in Dixon, Mo., Tuesday to stay until "he's ready to obey training rules." The playboy catcher, on whom the pennant hopes of the Indians may hinge, knew before he left, however, that he'd be back Monday.

CARDINALS.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 10 (U.P.).—Jerome (Dizzy) Dean will make his first appearance of the grapefruit league season against the New York Yankees Sunday, Manager Frankie Frisch of the St. Louis Cardinals announced today.

Frisch said that Dean "looked great" after watching him pitch two innings in an intracamp practice game.

"Dean didn't reveal a trace of the sore arm that hampered him during 1937," Frisch commented.

ATHLETICS.

Lake Charles, La., March 10 (U.P.). Clear weather for the first time this week enabled the Philadelphia Athletics to take part in a full-time workout today. Half of the squad drilled in the morning and the others in the afternoon.

INDIANS.

New Orleans, March 10 (AP).—Cleveland's Indians and the New Orleans Pelicans played a 4-4 tie today in their first exhibition game of the season. It was called after nine innings.

Ken Keltner, rookie Indian third baseman up from Milwaukee, was hit on the left elbow by one of Pitcher Dick Oyler's fast balls in the seventh. He fell to the ground in great pain, but examination afterward indicated he had suffered only a bruise.

Both line-ups were composed almost exclusively of rookies.

American Railroaders Gain Community Crown

The American Railroad five won the championship of the Roosevelt Community Center League last night, taking the second of the titular series game by 15 to 13 over the Roosevelt Boys Club. R. Pittiglio scored the winning basket.

Santa Anita horsemen told me that Seabiscuit couldn't have beaten Aneroid in the San Antonio Handicap a week before the big race . . . They say that reflections on Sonny Workman's riding of the 1937 handicap champion are bunk . . . and that after passing the wire Aneroid and Seabiscuit worked out an extra eighth of a mile and that Aneroid actually was drawing away from Seabiscuit . . . Workman's friends, strong in their language regarding the shift in riders that gave George Woolf the Seabiscuit mount in the big race, say that if Workman had pounded the horse, making his first start of the year, he might have knocked Seabiscuit out of his chace in the $100,000 race . . . It was reported that Woolf had agreed to split his share of the winning money with the injured Red Pollard, Seabiscuit's regular rider . . . Some line on the amount of beeting on the big race can be had from the fact that the $416.-994 bet on the single handicap, is better than a good Saturday at Bowie and three times as much as the record for a full day at Charles Town . . . despite the fact that movie stars invest heavily in Santa Anita racing, there are only six movie people among the 200 stockholders in the track . . . Bing Crosby, Hal Roache and Joe E. Brown are the only names I recognized . . . The Los Angeles papers carried only two paragraphs on War Admiral's Florida victory and failed to mention the fact that the weather was clear and the track was fast . . . The turf ball, the night of the big race, was a flop . . . Everything had been arranged with the thought that Seabiscuit was going to win . . . but you can't stop Californians . . . They gave Seabiscuit chief honors regardless, presenting owner C. S. Howard with big prizes for the horse's two seconds in successive years.

Turiello Manager Protests Bout Between Ross and Armstrong

Lou Brown Says Welter Champion Should Meet Challengers in His Class First.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A demand that the National Boxing Association take action against Barney Ross for defending his welterweight championship against Henry Armstrong after refusing to meet legitimate contenders of his own weight has been made by Lou Brown, manager of Saverio Turiello, fourth-ranking welterweight. Turiello clashes with Andre Jessurun Monday night at the Arena.

Brown filed his protest through the local boxing commission after filing a similar document with the New York State Boxing Commission. He pointed out that several outstanding challengers are available for Ross and that the champion already has violated the rule which says he must defend his title at least once every six months.

"It may be good business for Ross to box Armstrong," Brown wrote, "but it isn't good for the game to have a featherweight skip one class completely and jump up to a match with the welterweight champion. If such tactics are tolerated by the N. B. A., boxing is bound to suffer.

Contenders Ignored.

"It was good business for Benny Leonard to meet Pancho Villa, and Joe Gans to fight Stanley Ketchel, and an Armstrong-Ross bout is certainly bound to draw a good gate. But where does that leave the legitimate contenders for Ross' title who have been working for a bout with him? Why not make Armstrong clean up the lightweights, including Lou Ambers, before invading the welterweight division. And make him prove his right to a championship bout like any other fighter."

Heine Miller, secretary of Washington's boxing commission and a member of the N. B. A. rating committee, said Brown's protest will be forwarded to headquarters for consideration.

Both Turiello and Jesserum, meanwhile, are working like a couple of Turks in the gymnasium to be at their best Monday. The victor has been assured of the No. 2 welterweight ranking by the N. B. A., which will release its regular quarterly ratings the latter part of this month.

Turiello on Edge.

Jesserun, with nine consecutive victories under his belt—including one over Tony Ciaccio, who fought George Abrams here a couple of weeks ago, is particularly anxious to win. A brother-in-law of Al Reid, Jesserun became a proud papa two weeks ago, and is seriously gunning for the title.

Turiello, a glutton for punishment, has been boxing every day, fighting to keep on edge. The pleasant little Italian is never far from top form, since boxing not only is his business but his favorite sport. He gave a fine exhibition against Johnny Lucas in his intial appearance here last month, and figures to top that form against Jesserun.

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, meanwhile, has announced the semifinal, an eight rounder, which will have Willie Foo, sensational knockout artist, pitted against Bob Wilson.

Nowak Ordered To Giants' 'Farm'

New Orleans, March 10 (AP).—Bill Nowak, 19-year-old rookie second baseman claimed by both the New York Giants and the Cleveland Indians, was ordered tonight by Judge William Bramham, Minor League czar, to report immediately to the Jersey City Club, a Giant farm.

A few minutes after receiving the wire from Judge Bramham, Nowak packed his belongings and bade goodbye to members of the Cleveland Club, with whom he had been training since suddenly leaving the Giant camp at Baton Rouge earlier in the week.

Ace Sprint Stars Enter 'Abbey 50'

Navy and Villanova Star Runners to Compete in Big Event.

The appearance of a sprinter who bested Marty Glickman and Eulace Peacock earlier in the season promises to make the 50-yard dash of the Catholic University Indoor Games Saturday faster than Bill Bennings thought Aneroid to be.

Tagged the "Abbey Club Invitation 50-Yard Dash," the event is expected to be second only in class to the Rectors 1,000 and will include stars of both the Chapel Hill Southern Conference Games and the Maryland Fifth Regiment Games of Baltimore in its list of starters.

L. E. Chabot, of Navy, is the leader. Chabot has given promise of being the champion in the near future by winning in both his starts indoors this season. He ran the fastest time of any sprinter at Chapel Hill when he qualified in his heat of the 60-yard dash in 6.3 seconds, one-tenth of a second from the accepted world mark.

He defeated Vin Healy, of Georgetown in the finals in Baltimore Saturday night. He won the 70-yard dash intercollegiate in 7.4, only 1-5 off the record for that distance.

His closest competition is expected to come from the person of Bill Maher, of Villanova, who has defeated Marty Glickman, the Syracuse speedster, and Eulace Peacock, Temple star, in the Penn. A. C. games.

Pibby Young, from Washington College, who finished second to Chabot at Baltimore, is also entered and considered a possible winner. He nosed out Vin Heally, of Georgetown, in that race and will find the Hoya in the field again at Brookland.

In the next 30 seconds the complexion of the whole affair changed. Thunderbird was astride his tormentor and had shoved him clean through the ropes directly at the lay in Row A, south section. Without a moment's hesitation, she leaped to her feet and pummelled him with three satisfying hard pocketbooks to the noggin. Detton, it was evident, didn't appreciate this outside interference.

The Chef also was getting in a few licks when the end came, having Detton in a necklock. The eventual victor, however, merely toppled over backward, rolled over on the prostrate Indian, and put him down for the three strikes.

Terp Diamond Candidate Takes Glove on Horticultural Trip

Bill Steiner, lanky Maryland University senior, is majoring in horticulture but he doesn't let it interfere with his desire to earn a starting pitching assignment on the Terp baseball team.

Yesterday he stepped into Coach Burt Shipley's office to ask if he could borrow a catcher's mitt.

"There's no practice today," reminded Shipley. "The weather is too bad. Be here tomorrow at regularly scheduled time."

Then Steiner explained his need of a catcher's mitt was not for "today" but for a whole week.

"You see I'm going on a trip with a group of other students who, like myself, are majoring in horticulture and I'll be gone a week.

"Yes?" said Shipley.

"Well," continued the student, "I was thinking that I'm going to miss a week of practice and as the team's only been working out five days, all that will go to waste and I'll be forced to start all over."

"So I asked one of the fellows going along if he'd catch me a little while each day, after we had visited the various greenhouses and exhibits. He has agreed, so if you will permit me to take along a mitt for him, I'll be able to stay in shape."

After that, Shipley, without further ado, handed him the key and commanded him to "go down to the locker room and take one of three gloves laying on the trunk." Then he sent him off with a warning. "Don't overdo it, Bill. Take it easy, only about 15 minutes a day."

As the boy made his exit, Shipley turned to others sitting in the room. "There's spirit for you. He'll be moving from one place to the other for seven days, but still will be trying to win a starting job on the squad. And he's got a good chance, too."

Steiner will leave today with seven other male students to observe horticultural displays at points between College Park and Boston Mass., and will visit New York to see the giant indoor flower show now in progress.

tournament performer last year, and Johnny Swagart joined Glebel in a brilliant display of team work and defensive excellence. Swagart tallied 7 points and Gallagher 9, but their floor play was their chief claim to fame.

The St. John's reserves enjoyed an unexpected thrill when Coach Gene Augustefer inserted them in the final five minutes. The move was considered smart for the Johnnies, a five-man team, may possibly play three more contests. Albert Burch, a substitute forward, was impressive in his brief stay.

Eastern "Blows" Game.

Returning to the Eastern game, a painful subject, it can be said that its defeat was deserved, for the white-clad Lincoln Parkers never approached their usual efficiency and capped a miserable performance by "blowing" the decision in the last quarter.

Rallying gamely in the third period to overcome a 11-8 half time deficit and take a 21-20 advantage, Eastern reverted to it's sloppy ball handling and shooting to give Monroe the game.

Twice in the last two minutes, Eastern had possession of the ball in scoring range only to yield it on violation of simple rules. Once Russ Lombardy, its all-high guard, was guilty of double-dribbling and then with the final fatal minute ticking off, Lee Lusby fired a pass far over Ossie Cooksey who was open in a corner.

Quantrille Is Bright Spot.

At that Eastern had another opportunity, having the ball out of bounds under its own basket with 15 seconds to play. After successfully working a tricky play, however, Lombardy's midcourt heave struck the rim and rebounded on to the court, ending any further Eastern threat.

Clint Quantrille, Eastern's tall center, was a bright spot in a dismal showing. Using his height to the utmost, the blond scoring ace did yoeman work under both back boards and also threw in 9 points.

In other games, Durham, N. C., High School conquered Fork Union Military Academy, 39-25; Greenbrier M. A. topped Massanutten M. A., 33-30 and Due West, S. C., High School drubbed George Washington High School, of Danville, Va., 38-24.

Hecht's Bowlers Beat Bureau Team

The Hecht Co. bowling team broke up a second place deadlock with the Credit Bureau last night in the Department Store League when Hechtmen swept their set from the bureau team. Dave Penney's 360 led the winning charge.

The pace-setting Woodward & Lothrop, led by Bill Kingsolver's 357, held its three-game lead in first place by whitewashing Guy-Curran. Hy Baker's 353 featured Raleigh Haberdasher 2-1 win over Lansburghs.

Hahn's Shoes, led by Wes Chaney's 364 took the odd skirmish from Kann's despite Irwin Simon's 382 and Bob Sproul's 351.

JACK DEMPSEY
clearly states his position upon entering the Whiskey field

"I cannot help but realize my responsibility to the men of the community, especially the young men. I want to talk plain. Let no one ever say that Jack Dempsey ever advised any man to take a drink of anything, especially Jack Dempsey whiskey.

"Nobody ever admired a man just because he drank.

"Nor do I criticize any man who does. Whether to take a drink or not is for you yourself to decide.

"If you have any prejudice against drinking, you need go no further, because what follows will not interest you.

"To the man who elects to take advantage of his legal right to enjoy fine whiskey, I am very proud to announce that my years spent as your host at Jack Dempsey's Restaurant in New York as well as at the Dempsey-Vanderbilt Hotel at Miami Beach have afforded me an opportunity to learn what the most exacting tastes prefer in whiskey.

Cotton Lower; May 9.05 Cents

New York, March 10 (AP).—Early declines in cotton today under foreign selling and commission house liquidation were partially recovered on trade buying and covering. May, which had sold off from 9.06 to 9.00, closed at 9.05 with final prices 2 to 5 points net lower.

Early losses were extended a few points further during the first hour under Liverpool. Bombay, and scattered selling promoted by easier foreign markets and nervousness over the French situation.

Directors recommended creation of a total issue of 250,000 shares of preferred, subject to registration with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

New York, March 10 (AP).—Shipments of finished steel products by United States Steel Corporation subsidiaries for February totaled 474,723 tons, a decrease of 43,599 from January, the corporation reported today. Wheat Prices Decline With Light Exports Overseas Buying of Wheat and Corn Only 100,000 Bushels.

Chicago, March 10 (AP).—Late flurried efforts to stop losses of holders of wheat futures tumbled the Chicago market down a cent today to lowest prices since last November. The outbreak of selling of wheat futures came after estimates that export purchases of United States wheat and corn today amounted to only about 100,000 bushels. Most of the selling here developed in May wheat, which fell to 87¼ cents, as against 88¼ during yesterday's final transactions.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅛-⅞ under yesterday's finish; May 87⅜@87½; July 83⅜@83½. Corn, ¼-¼ down; May, 58⅜@58¾; July, 60½. Oats unchanged to ⅛ off. Rye showing ¼-1⅜ setback, and provisions unchanged to 5 cents lower.

Harper Sibley Named To New York Life Board

New York, March 10.—Harper Sibley, of Rochester, N. Y., an agriculturist, was nominated today to the board of directors of the New York Life Insurance Co. He will succeed Ridley Watts, who died December 31.

Mr. Sibley is manager of Sibley Farms, a 14,000-acre farm in the Illinois corn belt. He owns the Rancho Santa Rita in California, the Round T Ranch in Alberta, Canada, and Sibleyville Farms in New York, all of which are devoted chiefly to the raising and fattening of cattle for market. Mr. Sibley is a former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Bituminous Production.

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended March 5 as approximately 6,400,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week: 1937, 11,105,000 tons; 1936, 8,890,000 tons.

Market Seeks Lower Level As Trading Volume Shrinks

By Frederick Gardner,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, March 10.—Attempts to rally the stock market found little or no backing today and leaders ended a slow-going session with losses ranging from fractions to a point or more. A mild early morning upturn in the rails inspired some buying in other groups, but this lacked vigor and in the final hour the tendency was toward lower levels.

The proceedings were exceptionally sluggish from the start, but volume expanded a bit on last-minute offerings and transfers totalled 455,440 shares compared with 561,800 yesterday. The Associated Press average of 60 issues was off .4 of a point at 43.

There was nothing outstanding in the day's news to inspire commitments for the advance, but it also was noted selling was not of an urgent character.

The Railway group, while cool to the recent freight rate decision, attracted a timid following for a brief period on hopes the forthcoming White House conference to discuss transportation problems would result in Federal aid of some sort. It was later learned, however, the President had no concrete suggestions to make and would depend mainly on proposals to be advanced by the conferees.

Steels, up at first, gave ground subsequently. Handicapping this department was the disclosure of a sharp drop in U. S. Steel's February shipments. For the first two months these were off 57 per cent from the corresponding 1937 period. At the same time Crucible reported a substantial jump in earnings for last year and Bethelem announced plans for increasing production.

Whitney Failure.

Yesterday's defeat in the House of the "third basket" clause of the tax revision bill was pleasing to the financial sector, but not enough to promote much support for stocks. The Whitney failure continued a dampening influence, although it was thought falling trends could hardly be attributed to this development. Selling for income tax payments on March 15 was a minor factor.

A sharp break in railroad bonds and lower commodity trends were deterrents for stocks. Wheat at Chicago was off ⅛ to ⅞ of a cent a bushel, and corn down ⅛ to ¼. Cotton yielded 10 to 25 cents a bale. The French cabinet crisis brought another relapse in the franc to a new 12-year low, but this unit steadied later.

Further weakness was exhibited by General Foods, which lost 2⅛ points, at 27⅞, following plans of the company to issue new preferred stock for business expansion purposes. On the down side also were United States Steel, at 51⅝; American Telephone, 131¼; Westinghouse, 91⅛; General Motors, 33½; Santa Fe, 33; Baltimore & Ohio, 6⅛; Kennecott, 21⅝; Dupont, 115; United States Rubber, 29⅝, and J. I. Case, 85¼.

Up a shade were Phelps Dodge, at 24¾; Corn Products, 64½; Curtiss-Wright A, 16⅛, and Amerada, at 64¾.

Further selling activities in rail issues tended to depress the bond market today. Some of the carriers were pointed toward recovery in early trading, but reversed their course when secondary ratings dropped abruptly in the final hour.

In trading circles it was said the generally unimpressive response of the carrier group on Wednesday to the Interstate Commerce Commission's award of a part of the requested 15 per cent freight rate increase tended to dislodge holdings today.

While some carriers were seen as in line for considerable benefits from the rate award, financial circles continued to stress the present low volume of rail traffic as the industry's basic difficulty. Substantial improvement in railroads earning, it was contended, could be expected only with general business recovery.

A few industrial issues forged ahead, and low-yield corporations, though mixed, were steady. United States Governments were a little reactionary, excepting Treasury 3¼s, which closed 7-32s higher.

Among the larger rail losers were New York Central 3¼s, 1946, at 70, off 6; Baltimore & Ohio first 5s, 1948, at 48½, off 5½; B. & O. 4s, 1948, at 42, off 5⅞; Nickel Plate 4½, at 38, off 2½. Many more were down fractions to a point or more.

The Associated Press average of 20 rails dropped 1.6 points to 58.9, the lowest since April 25, 1933. Transactions totaled $6,718,050 face value, against $6,189,000 yesterday.

Improvement in Japanese loans and weakness in German 5½s supplied the principal action in the foreign division.

French Crisis Sends Franc to 12-Year Low

New York, March 10 (AP).—Shaken by the resignation of the Chautemps cabinet, the French franc broke today to the lowest quotation in terms of the dollar since 1926. At one time it traded in Wall Street around 3.15 cents, off about .03 of a cent, after falling to about 3.14 in London before dealings began here. The closing New York quotation was 3.15¾. Figured on the basis of the gold content of the dollar before it was revalued in 1934, the franc has dropped under the previous record low of 1.96 cents in the summer of 1926, at the height of France's post-war inflation.

Housing Loan Bank Campaign Wins Response

By Thomas M. Cahill.

A decididly favorable interest is being shown by Washingtonians in the opportunity of obtaining loans for residential modernization, alteration and repair under Title I of the amended national housing act. Recently, local banks began a newspaper advertising effort to inform citizens that such loans are now available, provided they are considered sound by the banking institutions.

Executive Vice President and Cashier Thomas J. Groom, Bank of Commerce & Savings, who is president of the District of Columbia Bankers' Association, reports a very satisfacory response to the campaign thus far. Although banking institutions have been making loans for renovation purposes for some time, the publicity movement has quickened the demand for assistance in this field, and Mr. Groom believes the drive is already a successful one.

There are 19 local banks participating in the campaign and they announce that the revised Title I enables individuals of acceptable classification to borrow sums up to $10,000 for the foregoing purposes. Persons owning their homes, business properties, or having leases extending six months longer than the terms of the loans, should be able to obtain modernization loans within a short time. When the loans are approved, the moneys are paid to borrowers or contractors. Loans are then repaid in regular instalments.

A survey reveals that funds obtained are being utilized for extensive repairs such as new flooring, roofing, residential additions, porches, extra rooms, new bathrooms, heating plants, modernized kitchens, construction of recreation rooms and landscaping. With the advent of spring, construction work will be easier and cheaper to carry out and a brisk pick-up in the repair field will result from the bankers' advertising drive for this important objective in the general recovery program.

Auto Sales Increase.

Frank K. Logan, president of Logan Motor Co., Ford direct factory dealer in Washington, announced yesterday that February and March business shows an increase in both new and used car sales over the corresponding period in 1937.

The increase of his company's business, he said, is due to a larger sales personnel and the enlarged facilities of the company's new headquarters at 1111 Eighteenth street northwest. Of particular importance in Mr. Logan's opinion, is the fact that his used-car inventory is 50 per cent lower today than it was 15 days ago. Ralph H. Dillon, sales manager of the company, stated that, in his opinion, the outlook for this year's automobile business was brighter than at any time during the last 12 months.

A. I. B. Speakers.

Stuart S. Ogilvie, chairmen of the public education committee of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, has announced that his committee has completed arrangements for several talks to be given by local bankers. The first in the series was delivered recently by Richard A. Norris, an assistant cashier, Lincoln National Bank, to the commercial department of Western High School.

Monday, Norman E. Towson, treasurer of Washington Loan & Trust Co., addressed the student body of Wilson Teachers College on the subject, "Investing Money."

Johns-Manville Jobholders Get Special Report

Corporation Recognizes Personnel as Partners in the Business.

New York, March 10.—The Johns-Manville Corporation, one of the country's largest manufacturers of building material, in issuing a special report to the personnel of the company, is being widely commended for its striking departure from corporate tradition. While the idea is not new, as Orlando F. Weber, the retired head of Allied Chemical & Dye, similarly recognized the workers as partners in the business, the bulk of the large corporations continue to restrict their reports to financial statements to stockholders.

"I propose this year to make a report to the jobholders," writes President Lewis H. Brown, "the persons whose time and labor invested in Johns-Manville make it possible to manufacture, distribute and sell our products.

"Our stockholders put their money into the company. In return, when business is good, they are paid 'dividends.' When business is bad the stockholder are 'laid off' in that they receive reduced dividends or sometimes no dividends at all.

Work an Investment.

"The jobholders put their work into the company. When business is good they receive regular pay and opportunity to earn more in wages or salary. If business conditions force the company to slow down production, some jobholders have to be 'laid off,' in that hours may be reduced, pay may be cut or actual layoffs may be necessary.

"It is the chief concern of the managers to try to plan for the best possible uninterrupted annual wage or salary for both jobholder and stockholder. Then neither of them will have to be 'laid off.' Your company managers know that both stockholders and jobholders are dependent upon each other, and that neither could profit without the support and co-operation of the other."

The report graphically explains the operation of the business, from the purchase of raw material to selling the many diversified products; how the stockholders supplied $10,000,000 for expansion last year; how new products are developed and why they mean more jobs, and the economic problems jobholders will face together with management and stockholders this year.

The average number of jobholders last year was 11,242, or 15 per cent more than in 1929. There are 7,138 Johns-Manville stockholders.

Curb Yields In Last Hour

New York, March 10 (AP).—A fair number of gains were washed out of the curb market in a mild flurry of selling near the close today. At the end most leaders were down. A few industrial specialties closed higher. The late dip followed the "big board" trend.

North American Rayon "B" finished at 20½, off 3; Pepperell, at 70, off 2; Aluminum Co., 72, off 2½; Sherwin Williams, 87, off ½; Pan-American Airways, 15½, off ¼. Humble Oil, Insurance Co. of North America, Babcock & Wilcox and Safety Car Heating & Lighting moved up 1 to around 2½ on small dealings.

Transactions totaled 79,000 shares, the lowest since April 1, 1935, against 98,000 yesterday.

Bank Clearings 20.2 Per Cent Under Year Ago

New Orleans Only City of 22 to Report Gain for March 9 Week.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 10.—Bank clearings for the latest period receded widely from those for the one preceding, which was swelled by first-of-the-month payments.

The fall from the corresponding 1937 volume, however, was shortened in the seventeenth of the unbroken series of declines from the previous year's level.

The aggregate for the 22 leading cities of the United States for the week ended Wednesday, March 9, as compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., amounted to $4,748,227,000, as against $5,950,467,000 for the 1937 week, which made the decline 20.2 per cent. This contrasted with a loss of 26.5 per cent in the year-to-year comparison for the preceding week.

New York clearings fell to $2,982,188,000, which represented a decrease of 21.8 per cent from the $3,815,767,000 a year ago. The turnover at outside centers, amounting to $1,766,039,000, was 17.3 per cent under the comparable 1937 figure of $2,134,700,000.

Clearings for the latest week dropped $478,460,000 from the total for the week preceding.

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY— Shattered Dream — By Frank Martinek, Lieut. Comdr. U. S. N. R.

STAND FAST, NAVY-- I'LL SHOOT THE FIRST MAN WHO BREAKS FOR THIS HATCH
WHY- YOU-YOU-!!
YOU ESKIMOS WERE ALWAYS FRIENDLY--WHO PUT YOU UP TO THIS ?
I'LL COUNT TEN AND IF YOU HAVEN'T DROPPED THAT GUN--
IT'S NO GOOD, BARKER. I KNOW THIS FELLOW NOW-
I HOPED I WAS WRONG, BUT THE INSTANT HE SPOKE, ALTHOUGH HE'S WEARING AN ESKIMO MASK, I KNEW THAT THE SCORPION IS STILL ALIVE!

Bob Burns Says—

A good motion picture director not only has'ta understand drama and photography but he also should know the personalities of all his players. The other day we were makin' a big musical number where the drum effects were very important. After the scene had run a while and the director noticed there wasn't any drums, he walked over to the drummer and says, "What's the matter—why didn't you come in then?"

The drummer says, "I lost my music." The director glared at him and says, "Why, you couldn't lose a big thing like a sheet of music!" The drummer looked up at him and says, "You don't know me, brother; I once lost my bass drum!"

D. C. Approves Two Inspection Sites for Autos

Stations Located in Southwest and Northeast Despite Protests.

Despite vigorous protest, the District Commissioners yesterday approved a recommendation to establish two automobile inspection stations, one in the northeast and the other in the southwest sections of the city.

George E. Eeneipp, manager of the Keystone Automobile Club, lodged the protest with Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, upon learning that only two sites had been recommended, and that the committee which made the recommendations had not made provisions for a station in the northwest section.

The protest said "we fail completely to understand why no station is to be set up in the northwest, the city's most populous area and the one which shows the largest motor vehicle registration."

"He'll Back Committee.

Hazen said he would side with the recommendations of that "able committee which took great pains studying the local situation. They know what they are doing."

The committee, headed by District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, includes Traffic Director William Van Duzer, Director of Highways H. C. Whitehurst and Edward A. Dent, District surveyor.

Donovan said a good location had been studied in the northwest section, but that under the present zoning regulations it would have been impossible to establish a station there.

Another point to be considered, Donovan said, was "accessibility." He stated, however, that if the present set-up is not sufficient to provide the needs for inspecting the 180,000 estimated cars in the District, that "maybe a location could be found in the northwest section."

Forbidden to Buy.

He pointed out that the District is forbidden by law to purchase any property for the stations, although it may be leased or rented.

Keneipp challenged Donovan's statement that "there was no available property in the northwest section."

Youth Admits Slaying Va. Girl In 'Beer Haze'

'Pleads Guilty' When He Sees Chain Found Beneath Body.

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, March 10.—Dective Leon Nowitzky announced tonight a 20-year-old youth had admitted the slaying of Madeline Griggs, young pharmacy clerk, whose battered and stabbed body was found in a vacant lot early yesterday. He blamed the crime on "a wine-and-beer haze."

Edward Parker Outland, curly haired and handsome, stated simply "I plead guilty," Nowitzky said, when confronted by a watch chain that was found beneath the girl's broken body.

In a statement police said was dictated to a stenographer from the Commonwealth's attorney's office, Outland said the wine-and-beer haze he was in left him with little memory of what had occurred other than he had been out with Madeline.

The girl's body, which lay unidentified all day yesterday until her sister viewed Madeline's clothes at police headquarters, bore, among other scars, a number of stab wounds. After an autopsy, Dr. C. D. J. MacDonald, city coroner, said the girl suffered a skull fracture, a stomach rupture, and a number of punctures of the head and shoulders.

Questioned about the stab-wounds, police said Outland replied:

"It all points to the pen-knife which was on the chain."

Nowitzky, who found the knife with the chain, said apparently the girl had been struck with some heavy instrument but quoted the youth as replying to a specific question:

"Honest, detective, unless it was my fist I don't know."

Ryan Widow Holds To Tale That Slain Mate Was a Brute

New York, March 10 (AP).—Patricia Ryan, 21, finished her second day on the witness stand at her murder trial today holding to her story that she killed her policeman husband, Michael, under the stress of his brutality.

The slender, dark-haired defendant portrayed Ryan as a drunkard who made abnormal demands on her. She admitted a gentle side to his character under cross-examination, but never contradicted the main points of her story.

"He was a good man when he was sober," she said.

She disclosed that Ryan brought a puppy for their son, Michael, jr., a few days before his death.

She denied that she had spent "the rent money" for other purposes, causing him to pawn her engagement ring.

U. S. Establishes 'Fair Trade' for Postal Courtships

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Trade Commission announced solemnly yesterday that Martin Rowan, of Milwaukee, had agreed to abide by certain fair trade practices in his postal courtship business.

Rowan, trading as the Jane Fuller Club and as Martin Rowan's Social Club, sells pamphlets containing social information and the addresses of women purportedly interested in courtship, the commission said.

And further, the commission said:

"The respondent hereby stipulates to cease from representing directly or otherwise that 'there are many good ladies seeking for just such a gentleman as you.'"

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

J. Franklin Viola presents his Chicago Company in Gounod's "Faust" in the Rialto Theater. The cast:

Faust ..... Ivan Velik
Marguerite .... Martha Errolle
Mephistopheles .. Nino Carboni..
Valentine ..... Jeffrey Gould
Siebel ..... Rita Taft
Martha ..... Vivian Currier
Conductor: Umberto Mugnai.

Last evening's sizeable and demonstrative audience in the Rialto Theater singled out for its most tumultuous applause Martha Errolle and rightly so. Her singing in the second act was alone worth the while of anyone who had decided to spend an evening hearing Gounod's familiar opera. She has the fortunate faculty of adapting her voice to the style of the music, as she admirably exemplified in the differentiation in tone quality between the ballade of the King of Thule and the scintillant jewel song.

Miss Errolle is a young artist of promise for whom one wishes a steady development. With a fresh and flexible voice capable of both delicacy and strength, she is using her endowment with an evident sense of its value, and if she does not overtax her resources prematurely, she should go far toward success. Personably ingratiating and at ease in chacterization, she has a good stage presence, and the one enemy she has to fear is overconfidence in the power of her full tone.

Of the other members of the cast the one who made the closest approximation to Miss Errolle's standard was Jeffrey Gould, in the role of Valentine. He has a resonant barytone of agreeable quality and employs it effectively without straining for dramatic points.

Ivan Velik was a disappointing Faust, since he did not fill the lyrical requirements of the part. Either he was not in good vocal condition or his voice has an unevenness that militates against persuasive eloquence. His upper register seemed uncertain and lacked the sweetness that this romantic impersonation demands.

Seldom indeed in these days do we see a complete performance of "Faust" with all the eight scenes of the five acts. The Walpurgis Night is practically never included, and there are various omissions according to the exigences of time and the decision of the conductor. From last evening's performance were missing the first two scenes of the third act, and the first scene of the last act.

Martin, Frey Declare Labor Peace Possible

Leaders in A. F. L., C. I. O. Offer Counter Views in Radio Forum.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 10.—John P. Frey, vice president of the A. F. L., and Homer Martin, head of the C. I. O. Auto workers union, agreed in a radio forum discussion tonight that peace between the two great contending labor groups was possible.

But, Frey asserted, there could be no armistice until there was a "general return of loyalty (by the C. I. O.) to the basic principles of self-government." There would be an agreement now, he added, but for the "dictator control" of C. I. O. Chieftain John L. Lewis.

Martin, offering no counter attack upon A. F. of L. personalities, suggested a 5-point formula for a possible reconciliation, although emphasizing that he spoke for himself alone.

1. Early resumption of peace conferences.

2. A "definite and clearly stated recognition by the A. F. of L. of the principle and policy of industrial unionism for the mass production industries."

3. Immediate steps to "solve the jurisdictional problems affecting such C. I. O. unions as are functioning in fields where there are older A. F. of L. unions in existence."

4. Submission to sub-committees of jurisdictional matters with a time limit for "achieving results."

5. An understanding that "none of the C. I. O. unions are to be admitted piece-meal or in groups into the A. F. of L. upon the attainment of a peace basis. The admission of C. I. O. unions must be achieved as a body, upon the clearing up of the entire situation."
